Charles Wilmoth named new chief of police

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

The city council Monday night unanimously selected Charles E. Wilmoth, 54, as the new Romulus Public Safety Director.

Wilmoth, who will resign as Chief of Police in Garden City, a position he has held for eight years, will leave that post to accept the Romulus position on March 10, he said.

Wilmoth replaced former Romulus Chief of Police Don Flood, fired by Mayor Beverly McAnally last November.

In presenting her choice of a public safety director to the city council, McAnally said that Wilmoth's "experience as a command officer in Garden City" was one reason he stood out from the list of applicants for the position.

Wilmoth was a command officer in Garden City for 21 years. He had been chief of police during the last eight years.

"We feel he will be an asset to our department," McAnally said. "We're pleased to have a man of Chuck Wilmoth's stature come to our community."

Wilmoth said he hopes to "fulfill all the dreams" McAnally has for the department.

The mayor conducted a three-month search for a new public safety director, including 54 applicants from as far away as Alaska.

A review board consisting of Councilman William Wadsworth, Acting Chief of Police John Lewis and Jamil Akhtar, recommended the finalist, McAnally said.

His term of employment, as stated in a contract drawn up by the city attorney, will run concurrent with the office of the mayor. Similar conditions existed for Flood, for which some controversy was raised when he was dismissed during the mayor's second term.

Wilmoth, who resides in Garden City, said he would first "ascertain whether I will be accepted by community" before making any decisions about moving into the city.

"Because of the nature of the job, I'd like to wait and see first," he said. "It's hard to make a judgement. I'd like to be a part of the community."

As the second public safety director for the city since the inception of the police and fire department in 1981, Wilmoth will head a police force of 40 officers in addition to a volunteer fire department.

He holds a bachelor of science degree and an associate of arts degree in law enforcement and protection from Mercy College in Detroit.

He also holds a certificate in executive level training from Northwestern University in Illinois.

He was crucial in the development of a central dispatch for police and fire communications in Garden City, a

Lucas, commissioners argue about troopers' fate

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

A vote by the Wayne County Commissioners has temporarily allowed state troopers stationed at Detroit Metropolitan Airport to remain at that facility pending further action by the county executive.

The 12-0-2 decision, entered by the members of the board Feb. 20, means that the decision of county executive William Lucas to remove the troopers from their present station at the airport to a new location on Middlebelt Road, was overruled and remains on hold until the commissioners and Lucas come to an agreement on who has the authority to dictate placement of the troopers.

Lucas has 10 days in which to respond by either vetoing the ordinance or, as one spokesperson from his office stated, "ignoring it."

"The state troopers provide Wayne County with hundreds of thousands of dollars in free aid," said Commissioner John Hertell. "It's really not fair to the public to remove them from the airport site when, at a time when terrorism is increasing at airports and with an increase in drug trafficking, we need all the police there, not less."

Hertell, who said that commissioners were notified of the impending eviction of the troopers "by the media," said that the recently-passed ordinance "is the law of the county."

According to Lucas's office spokesperson Mike Conway, Lucas is expected to veto the measure next week.

"If Mr. Lucas is not going to obey the law of the county, we will take him to court," Hertell said.

State police Major Lewis Smith said Monday that he expected Lucas to veto the ordinance.

"I'm not totally familiar with Wayne County government," Smith said, "but I would expect he would veto it. I anticipate that the county board will override his veto with a two-thirds vote."

If Lucas vetoes the measure, said Hertell, "we will override it with 10 votes."

In question is whether the county executive can "dictate policy" without addressing the commissioners, Hertell said.

Lucas contends, Conway said, that the ordinance is not an "appropriately passed ordinance."

Local mother angered over son's injury at junior high

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

Cindy Harkai was ready to accept the fact that her son was badly injured during an attack at the junior high last fall—after all, schools are often beehives of delinquent behavior.

And she was ready to accept the fact that her son, who was certified learning impaired after more than seven years in the school system, would probably not return to day classes because he was so frightened.

But when she read in the newspaper last week that school administrators failed to recognize her 16-year-old son's plight of dealing with scars and emotional damage, she couldn't help but cry out.

"I was shocked when I read that Dr. Bedell thought it was a 20-year-old drop-out involved in the incident last fall," Harkai said. "Everyone knows it was John—why didn't he?"

On Feb. 17, Superintendent of Schools William Bedell issued a fact sheet on his findings of violence in the schools, prompted by parents' worries over several incidents at both the junior high and high school.

In his report, Bedell stated that "...the young man hit with a bottle at the football game was wandering around in front of the Junior High School. He cannot identify his assailants. He did not enter the game at any time."

"Initially, I didn't tie the two together," Bedell said. "I asked the people at the school about it. They told me the kid was a drop-out. I really didn't know that the Harkai kid was the one hit with the bottle."

Harkai claims that her son entered the game with a friend and that they were both leaving when the friend indicated to her son that he should proceed to the car and wait for him there.

"That's when three black boys approached him in the school parking lot and said 'What's your name?' John responded that everyone called him 'Bobo'," Harkai said. "Then they asked him if he knew Donny Turner. John said 'yes' and they suddenly began hitting him in the face."

Turner, a Romulus student, was apparently involved in a scuffle with another boy and both were subsequently suspended.

A police report filed Oct. 4, 1985 indicated that the three assailants, none of whom have yet been identified, struck John Harkai with a bottle, which eventually shattered and caused glass fragments to become imbedded in John's face.

Two operations later with another impending, Cindy said her son still remains at home. School administrators contacted her just last week about returning her son to adult education classes.

"When it happened, I called Mr. Baldwin at the school and he told me if John came and picked out the assailants, he would put them on three-day suspension," Harkai remembered. "I said, 'three days'. What kind of punishment is that for hurting my son the way they did? He just told me that was all he could do."

School policy dictates a variety of methods of punishment, including suspensions to permanent removal from the district.

Baumann upset over 'not guilty' verdict

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

Saying he would prosecute again if he ever had to, Councilman Barry Baumann reluctantly accepted the decision of a Washtenaw County jury that returned a verdict of not guilty against the man Baumann accused of sexually assaulting him last October.

"I would go through the court proceedings again," Baumann said. "This bothers me but I know I did the right thing even though it was really tough."

Baumann, who said he has received psychological help since the he was allegedly abducted, sexually assaulted and left stranded after his alleged assailant stole his car in Ypsilanti Township Oct. 27, 1985, said that the publicity has "not hurt his career" as a politician in Romulus.

"The support of the community has been great," Baumann admitted shortly after the verdict was delivered. "The way I console myself is by remembering that had I not gone through with this and someone else down the line got hurt, I could never forgive myself."

Jeffrey Lee Hammond, the 25-year-old Ypsilanti man police held in custody for the incident, was cleared of two of three charges Feb. 20 after a two-day trial.

The male and female jury found Hammond innocent of the charges of armed robbery and first-degree criminal sexual conduct but guilty of auto theft.

He was apprehended by Ohio police shortly after the 1:45 a.m. incident. He was driving Baumann's automobile, police said. Hammond told police at the time that Baumann had loaned him the car.

Washtenaw County Sheriff Det. Lloyd Stamper said Monday that it was a question of the jury "not believing" Baumann's claim that he was attacked.

"I think they just felt it was mutually-consented upon," Stamper said. "(The prosecution) asked Baumann if the incident embarrassed him (as a politician) and he responded 'no'—that kind of hurt him, I'd say."

Public defender Walter White agreed.

"The real problem the prosecution had was that there were so many things not real believable," he said. "(Baumann) claimed he had left a gay bar alone that my client found his way to the other side of (Baumann's) car where he supposedly had a knife that (Baumann) never did see—I find that a little implausible."

White said that discrepancies found between witness testimony and Baumann led to the not-guilty verdict.

White said Baumann's claim that he had to "walk a mile" to the home of Caroline and Frank Wahla was inaccurate. "It turned out that their house was the second door down from the trailer home. He didn't have to walk a mile in the cold."

White added that Baumann's admittance in court that he had frequented the Flame at least "20 times" caused the jury to react skeptically about Baumann's claim against Hammond.

A moving experience

The Romulus Historical Society recently announced the receipt of $500 from the Romulus Kiwanis Club to be used toward the renovation of the first city school house. The club's donation is the first for the group trying to raise funds, now that the building has been relocated to its current site on Hunt Street, to remodel the building to its past glory. Included in renovation plans is the rewiring of electrical wires, modifying the plumbing and possible restructuring of the outside frame.

Howard and Janice Overmyer, of Romulus, donated the building to the city, but Pearl Varner, President of the society, said a lot more funds are needed for the improvements planned. Donations can be sent to the Romulus Historical Society, Gloria Chandler, treasurer, 9261 Ozga, Romulus, 48174.

Editor's Note: Items for the Community Calendar must be submitted in writing by no later than noon Friday the week prior to publication. Calendar items can be mailed to Associated Newspapers, Inc., P.O. Box 578, Wayne, 48184, or dropped off at our Belleville office at 116 Fourth St., Belleville, or our main office at 35540 Michigan Ave., Wayne.

Students, citizens celebrate Black History Month

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

How can I make the world a better place to live in? People to me have lost sight of their goals so...religion is the basis to make my plan work. Everyone would be loving, kind and generous. Religion would teach us to work together side by side, regardless (sic) of what color we are or where we come from.

Commission seeks award nominees

Romulus residents active in recreational activities in the community are being sought by the Romulus Recreation Commission for consideration as recipients of the 'Distinguished Service Award.'

The first-ever presentation, sponsored by a five-member panel chosen from the commission, will seek those candidates who best exemplify residents with "good community involvement in recreational activities."

According to Jerry Kittle, chairman of the recreation commission, the idea sprung from a desire of the group to recognize individuals and to promote recreation within the community.

"Romulus residents are very active in recreational activities," Kittle commented recently. "I grew up here in Bedell said that since Harkai never identified his assailants, and subsequently, the police closed their case, the school could not administer any punishment.

Harkai claims that it is not the lack of punishment but rather the lack of sensitivity and commitment to resolving what appears to be a lack of communication among school administrators that angers her most.

"No one until last Thursday called me about returning my son to school," Harkai said. "It's been four months and John has never actually gone to school, because he is now 16, said 'I quit.' It's only because of the amount of absences that he was unofficially dropped."

Harkai said she receives a telephone call every day that her son is not in school reminding her of her son's truancy. The 'message' she receives irks her.

"I get this stupid phone call from a computer telling me 'your son John was not in school today,'" Harkai said. "I had never, until last week, had anyone from the school call and ask about John, except that computer."

"We didn't pursue the matter," Bedell said, "because, legally, the boy can drop out of school. (Harkai) keeps saying that she doesn't want him back in regular school. I've told her we will place him in adult education or we can reenroll him, it's up to her."

Harkai said her son is afraid to return to school for fear that what happened once will reoccur.

He is not the kind of kid who is a trouble-maker," she said. "John is a follower, not a leader. He paid that night for a friend's mistake and a lot of times that's how kids will pay you back."

Harkai is considering filing a lawsuit against the school district and superintendent for denying her son an education and for slandering him unless a retraction is publicly made.

"I'm not sure where that will get me," Harkai admitted, "but you get tired of hearing every incident is an 'isolated incident'. Maybe this will get them to realize they're not all isolated."

"When you go through something like this, it really doesn't enter your mind that you basis for at least four youngsters having received a $50 savings bond for how they could make the world a better place.

Craig Evans, from North Junior High, went on to add that "...one person can make a difference, because of the 'domino theory.' This theory assumes that if one person does something, someone is bound follow. After a period of time, the number of followers multiplies..."

Anjeanette Parks, another student, said that one way to make the world a better place is "by talking to people, to encourage them that we all can live in peace and harmony in the world we live in."

Romulus for 43 years and we've always had plenty of recreational activities during that time."

Qualifications for consideration include candidates who have at least five years volunteer work behind them in "one or more recreational activities" in the city.

This does not strictly apply, Kittle said, to persons who coach Little League games, but to those who oftimes are behind the scenes for any recreational activity.

Nominees may be submitted to the Recreation Department by 4:30 p.m. March 17, 1986.

The five-member panel will announce the selection during Michigan Week, May 17-24.

Information submitted must include name, phone number, address, city and accurate description of the candidate's achievements in recreation.

The nominee's name and phone number should also be included.

should do something about it but when I read that in the paper that he was a drop-out, I just got mad."

Bedell said that John was not attending classes at the time and in his opinion, "that constitutes a drop-out."

"But maybe his parents are calling it absence due to fear of returning to school," Bedell said.

School registration records were unavailable. It is not known whether John was listed as an enrolled student at Romulus High School at the time. His mother said her son was attending classes up until the time of the injury.

John Harkai has had his share of problems with a school system that, at first, refused to recognize that he was learning disabled.

It took years of battles with administrators and confirmation by outside evaluators to move the school board into certifying him learning disabled, Harkai said.

"We knew the kid needed help," she said, "but they just kept telling us that we didn't spend enough time with him."

With five children, Harkai thinks she invests enough time with all her children. It is the

Asbestos found in Hayti basement

Samples from pipes in the basement of Hayti Elementary School on Beverly Road have been found to contain asbestos, a fiber found in some insulating material and known to cause asbestosis, a chronic lung inflammation.

The discovery, made by teachers and custodians, who noticed "stuff on the ceilings that looked funny," according to superintendent of schools, William Bedell, was immediately analyzed and sealed with plastic "sleeves" to prevent human contact.

The finding presents "no immediate danger."

In the past, pipes covered with asbestos insulation were wrapped in plastic sleeves, Bedell said. There was apparently no immediate danger nor

"As an individual, I can make the world a better place by loving all people, and when I can, serve in public duties. I must read and be concerned about world and local affairs so that along with my education, I can be aware of my responsibilities to my country..." read Sonja Braxton, a Wick Elementary student.

In addition to the essay readings, the program consisted of displays of talent, the Romulus R.O.T.C., headed by senior chief Claudius Polk and the presentation of community certificates to outstanding Romulus citizens.

Guests included Mayor Beverly McNally, who presented a resolution to the family of Gregory Walker, mysteriously killed in Detroit two years ago, superintendent of schools William Bedell, assistant superintendent Terrel LeCesne and city treasurer John Lewkowicz.

Keynote speaker Detroit councilman Clyde Cleveland was also present.

Sponsored by the Wee Care About Others under the direction of Gwen Sibert and Black History chairwoman, Alfaye Woods, the idea behind 'A Proud People' was to include "everyone, blacks and whites" Sibert said, in a celebration of black history.

Recipients of the community service awards went to the following individuals:

Geneva Clark, of Family Neighborhood Services 'Eager Beaver Program' for mentally handicapped citizens of Romulus; Zeffie Beanum, a community volunteer, past Girl Scout leader and parent-teacher organization member; Jimmie Raspberry, former city councilman, Lt. Col. Maj. Jason Lovette, past member of the Romulus Board of Education, Rotary Club member and 1984 Person of the Year; Thomas J. Coleman, community advocate.

school district that refuses to recognize when a child within the system needs help, she said.

It took Dan Bales, a school board trustee, to ask board to whether "it had done everything possible for this boy" to change the conditions of John's schooling, she added.

Now that she has won one battle, Harkai finds herself torn between fighting for what she claims is a gross injustice) or simply letting her son remain home.

"He's been out for four months now," she said. "I'm in no hurry to see in placed back in school for one class in the adult education program."

Harkai said she chose to speak out know because of the Robert O'Day incident. What happened there, she said, is only a precursor of what's to come if school administrators don't "wake up."

"Look what's going on in the schools," she said. "When Bobby O'Day died, John said to me, 'You know, mom, (they) not only got me, now they got Bobby.' Back when this happened to John, I told them to do something about it then, before another incident occurred. They wouldn't listen to me."

have there been problems since the latest discovery.

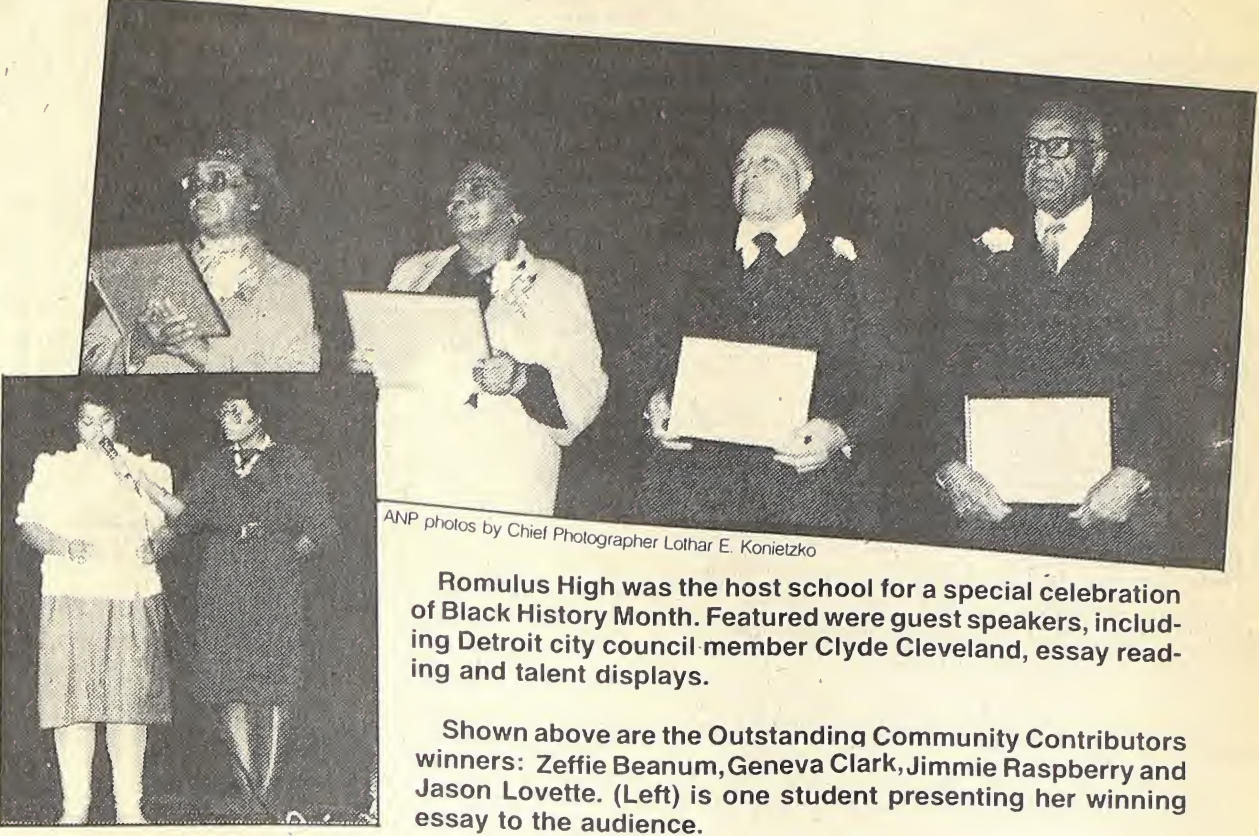

"There has been asbestos in the building since the place was built about 40 years ago," he said. "We had already taped those pipes in 1977 and as an extra precaution, we used the sleeves."

Bedell said those portions of the building where asbestos had been sealed was "okay" after inspections in 1977 and 1982.

"We've sealed up the pipes for the rest of the year," he said, "but we probably ought to remove the (asbestos)."

Romulus High School was found to contain asbestos in 1982.

The material was removed during the summer of 1982 at a cost to the school district of $100,000.

Naval recruit home on leave

He's got his foot one step closer to his own door now that the Navy has allowed him a 15-day leave.

Todd Nado, a 20-year-old Navy recruit, is home, temporarily.

arily, to the relief of his parents, who for months have been attempting to secure their son's release from the armed services since his debilitating attack on base last year.

"It's just great to have him home," Carol Nado said. "We feel comfortable now, we don't have to worry about him, at least for now."

The Nados contacted Congressman William Ford's office last month to request his intervention into the investigation surrounding Todd's attack at Norfolk Naval Base in Virginia July 8, 1985.

"We are still pursuing his release," said a spokesperson from Ford's office. "We are in almost daily contact with naval officials in Washington to see what we can do."

Carol Nado said that she has been talking to people who said that "Todd's release is pretty much going to happen."

"When he gets back to his base, he goes for a psychological evaluation and that will pretty much determine what happens," she explained.

Scared and still baring the scars from his attack, Todd has been enjoying his leave by getting "plenty of rest and visiting relatives."

The first day home, Feb. 21, was "a little tense" Carol said, but he is slowly adjusting to the non-combat life.

Todd Nado was attacked by an assailant bearing a 4-inch dull knife while drinking with a fellow shipmate.

Todd later told police that the man with whom he was drinking suddenly approached him from behind and began stabbing him, eventually 55 times, before he fell unconscious.

Todd said that the attack was apparently the result of his rejecting the sexual advances of the man.

The incident resulted in a five-month hospital stay.

Naval investigators are still pursuing the case, they said, despite the fact that the perpetrator has never been found.

Honorable discharge from the Navy is usually offered to those who become disabled while in the Navy or to those who become the sole family supporter, officials said.

Todd's parents, and Congressman Ford, contend that the experience has been psychologically damaging to Todd.

According to Hammond's testimony, he had discovered, after having just met Baumann, that Baumann was "politically active" in Romulus.

White said an argument, eventually leading to each attempting to threaten the other, resulted out of Baumann's disinterest in promoting Hammond's strive for gay rights.

Hammond testified at that point that Baumann responded by saying that he was not going to be "blackmailed" into compliance with Hammond's suggestion and began "peeling off his clothes" in an attempt to feign an attack, White said.

Baumann said he had "felt good" about his testimony before Judge William F. Ager.

"I was stunned for quite awhile when I heard them deliver the not guilty verdict," Baumann said, "but I came back down to earth and I've got to get back on with my life."

Baumann charged Hammond with abducting him a knife point shortly after having briefly met at the Flame bar in Ann Arbor.

Baumann said that Hammond then drove to his mother's mobile home and sexually assaulted him, tied him with bed sheets and left him bound and nude on Munger Road in Ypsilanti Township.

Baumann then told the jury he then made his way to the home of the Wahla's where he received clothing and awaited the police.

Hammond, who was convicted of auto theft in Florida, faces up to five years imprisonment.

He will be sentenced April 4 in Washtenaw County Circuit Court.

traffic bureau, a youth assistance program and a centralized records system.

He helped develop a crime prevention program currently used by other communities as a model and organized and administered an alcohol program for 43 police agencies in Wayne County, a venture utilizing more than $1 million over three years.

"Basically, I feel good about leaving Garden City—I'm leaving on a good note," Wilmoth said. "I'm looking forward to Romulus... the Gateway to the World, a city on the move."

Wilmoth said he was looking forward to "growing" with the Romulus Police Department and "addressing the needs of the department."

Major changes within the department will come "slowly", he said.

"You have to learn how to walk before you run," he said. "I'm going into a strange environment. Each police department has its own way of doing things. All these things will have an impact on the changes I make."

Saying there is "always room for improvement," Wilmoth declined to be specific about what immediate changes he intended to make.

Traffic problems resulting from the proximity of the airport and the establishment of more neighborhood watch programs are two areas he will address, he said.

"I'm looking at Romulus as a challenging department," said Wilmoth. "That's what attracted me here. This department has only been here four-and-a-half years and its come a long way since then."

Wilmoth is married and has four children. He has resided in

"They are dealing with management of the county and that clearly falls within the jurisdiction of the county executive," Conway said.

Conway said that the argument by commissioners that the relocation is a matter of policy—policy dictated by that body, "would only make sense if (Lucas) were kicking state troopers out of the airport."

"But he's not," he said.

Garden City for 27 years and will spend his last days as police chief "tying up the loose ends".

"It's hard leaving after all these years," he said. "But people are always looking for changes."

"He's merely relocating them and therefore not making policy."

The four state troopers located at metro airport were notified last December of the county executive's plans to consolidate law enforcement agencies in Building 358 on Middlebelt Road in Romulus.

They refused to relocate at which time an eviction notice was served, giving them until March 12 to vacate the airport.

MALE POLICE OFFICER PLUGS FEMALE OFFICER!

Dear Letter Writer:

I want to write a letter of recommendation for a fellow, female police officer. I believe she is an asset and I want to put my thoughts in writing.

Sincerely, OE

To Whom It May Concern:

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I submit this letter of commendation on behalf of Sally (name is fictitious).

Sally has worked for our department, as an intern, from Michigan State during June, July and August of 1985. Our department is comprised of 15 officers and a new, highly-educated, young police chief. Due to a recent change in our administration, our department is now functioning autonomously and serving 15,000 residents in a 2.7-square-mile area. Needless to say, the department is suffering from upheaval, resulting in staff and procedure changes. Our department is non-traditional in nature; our officers work 12-hour days and in a team concept. Sally arrived in the department during this transitional period.

In an attempt to lend additional credibility to this tribute to Sally, my background consists of 12 years in investigation patrol. I attended graduate school at the University of Michigan and at Cooley Law School in Lansing, Mich. I am, without a doubt, able to accurately assess Sally's contributions these past three months.

Among others, Sally's experiences have included working with a majority of department officers, some with as much as 25 years on the streets with educational diversification from high school graduates to graduate-level students. Being able to adapt to this wide spectrum of people is a "feather" in Sally's cap.

Sally was involved in many assignments, most notable, however, was her participation in the development of a detailed, tactical and logistics map. In the course of her police work, Sally put her time in on nights, days and, of course, our new 12-hour shift.

Our town is primarily a white, middle-to upper middle-class suburb of the city of Detroit. Our expressways are directly linked to Detroit. Although certainly not an area with a crime rate nearly as high as Detroit, we nevertheless have our share of problems. Sally was exposed to working with detectives, going to the crime lab, reading original statements, and was present during arrests as well as being involved in investigations. She consistently exhibited an ability to work well with people at all levels, and, often, in crisis situations. She has a deep commitment to helping people.

Sally is small in stature and obviously, female. Despite these seemingly impossible odds, Sally was well received by others on the force and although the officers are to be commended for this, it was her communication and sensitivity skills that were responsible for her achievements in this area.

I have spent a lot of time with her and have observed her reactions in crisis management situations, serious accidents and dealing with people in trauma. I felt totally secure during the times that Sally was my partner. I am certain that I can speak for the other officers and say that none of them would be reluctant to work with her or have her as a partner. Under the circumstances, this is a strong statement to make about an intern.

I would sincerely recommend that her application for employment be considered and acted upon.

Sincerely, OE

COMMENT:

With this type of prevailing attitude about male and female law enforcement personnel, how can this town go wrong?

By State Senator William Faust

'Right To Know'

February could be a very significant month for Right To Know legislation, the three-bill package that would give workers, firefighters and the public the right to know about hazardous chemicals to which they may be exposed. In fact, I am hopeful that the Chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, Senator Doug Cruce of Troy, will take the bill up in the next few weeks so that my colleagues can join me in voting to send House Bill 4111 and its two companion bills, HB 5250 and 5251, to the full Senate for a vote.

Right To Know is an issue whose time has come in Michigan.

In the past four years many of us in Lansing have fought for this legislation which is designed to protect innocent people from unknowingly being exposed to hazardous chemicals. Our efforts were blocked during the last legislative session by business interests and Republican legislators who argued that Right To Know would add to the cost of doing business in Michigan.

In 1984 a similar Right To Know package was approved by the House of Representatives only to be buried in the Republican-Democratic effort to force the committee to send the package to the Senate floor for a vote was narrowly defeated along a party-line vote. Because of Republican opposition to the package, Michigan has become the last state in the nation with the authority to enforce federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) standards to adopt Right To Know legislation.

This session, the critics of Right To Know have finally shown a willingness to compromise and negotiate on this issue. We have convinced Republican and business leaders that they have as much to gain from the Right To Know package as do workers. Business recognizes the need to take reasonable steps to protect the health of employees and the public. By providing workers, firefighters and the public access to information about potentially dangerous or lethal chemicals to which they may be exposed, business may reduce its liability for injury, illness or death caused by those chemicals. Also, we have helped business leaders understand that this legislation will help reduce the business costs associated with sick pay and low productivity.

Finally, it is widely acknowledged that the federal Right To Know guidelines would discriminate against some businesses and workers by excluding as much as 70 percent of the state's workplaces from compliance. Those non-manufacturing businesses exempted by the federal standards are perceived to have unfair advantage. This has convinced business in the state that when the federal standards are adopted and enforced by the package pending in the Senate they could apply to all employers covered by the Michigan Occupational Safety and Health Act (MIOSHA).

Keeping that in mind, a landmark agreement was reached late last year that was instrumental in the House of Representatives' unanimous approval of House Bills 4111, 5250 and 5251. Remarkably, the interest groups on both sides of this issue have endorsed the package in writing and to date, there has been no organized opposition to the package in the Senate Labor Committee. I am working to make sure nothing delays or prevents the package from reaching the Senate, I am confident the package will be approved by the Upper Chamber and signed into law by a supportive Governor Blanchard.

I am sure you join me in looking forward to passage of this package which will enable all of us to inform and protect ourselves on the hazardous chemicals to which we may be exposed.

A second opinion...

Quite often, in cases of serious illness, patients facing radical medical procedures seek the opinion of a second medical expert in an effort to determine exactly what is best for them.

That action is exactly what we are urging in the case of the People's Community Hospital Authority. While a physician may not be needed, an independent authority, with skill, experience and knowledge is...and only the elected leaders of our local communities can save the patient from what may be a costly euthanasia.

We urge each mayor and township supervisor to immediately phone their municipal representative to the PCHA board and insist that as a representative of the community, they cast their votes tomorrow night for a delay on the proposed altering of the structure of the PCHA.

This issue, which casually appeared on agendas in municipalities this month, is of serious import to every taxpayer in this area...and to every city and township. It is not an issue to be taken lightly or to be voted on with only a cursory or less-than-informed investigation.

The proposal at hand would change the PCHA structure to that of a non-profit corporation and place the management of the hospitals and the assets of the present authority into the hands of a 15-member board of directors. There would be no return of any of the present $33 million surplus to the taxpayers, there would be no repayment for the facilities which were built with bond issues and tax revenue, and as a non-profit corporation, none of the hospitals would pay taxes to the cities in which they operate.

The proposal seems to overlook the fact that all the facilities in question were built with tax dollars, that the operating revenue which has the $33 million balance came from tax payers who utilized the services at those hospitals and that the present PCHA is a type of state agency funded through tax money.

Members of the board argue that any return of the funds would have to be to the state, as the authority has been classified as such an agency--but if that is true, then how can a state agency simply by a vote of the board of directors become a private, albeit non-profit, corporation?

The answer is, of course, through state legislation sponsored by a sympathetic congressman or state representative. But if such legislation were to be enacted, and the PCHA is no longer a state agency--why, in that circumstance, can't the surplus funds be returned to the taxpayers? Members of the board claim that these funds are not the taxpayers' as they came from the operation of the hospitals, not from tax funds. But if we were to invest in, say, a hot dog stand, choose someone to operate that stand, and that business then generated a profit, or excess operating funds, wouldn't that profit then belong to us?

This analogy is somewhat simplistic, but it is sound. And while support of the present proposal seems nearly unanimous in this area, there are members of the board, and members of the authority downriver who strongly disagree with this proposal on many of these same grounds. Influential members of the board have been described by their peers as "pied pipers" leading less experienced and less informed members to vote in the manner they have chosen for them. Sentiment and opinion runs strong on this issue, and resentments very deep.

The board attempted this realignment 20 years ago, and at that time the state attorney general stepped in and blocked any such move. The injunction issued by court order then in Ingham County still stands as permanent, and this change could only be made with that restriction lifted. The office of the attorney general has already stated that they will be "very interested" in any attempts to rescind this order and proceed with this change.

Consequence of action

Each day, in our hectic world, people are required to make decisions that have an impact on their own lives as well as the lives of others.

More often than not, the action they choose is taken with little consideration for the total consequence of their behavior. Many times their action is a "knee jerk" type of reaction to the stimulus of others.

As they taught us in physics class, "Every action has an equal and opposite reaction." This law of physics seems to hold true in the world of human relations as well. When someone takes a verbal "poke" at us, it is a basic instinct to return the "hostile fire" being directed toward us. If we are before an audience, we finish our remarks and ask for questions, and one is directed to us, we respond, action--reaction. If we are a pupil in class and the instructor calls on us to respond to a lesson question, we answer. Again, action--reaction.

What keeps lawyers busy and the courts full is action-reaction sometimes called complaint-counter complaint, testimony and cross-examination, conviction and appeal and so on. Sometimes the actions of others are simple in motivation and innocent, sometimes they are planned, calculated and Machiavellian in nature. There are others who have schemed, and plotted as in a large-scale game of chess, considering in advance the counter moves of others and anticipating every possible reaction by their opponents, detractors or victims.

Several things have brought all this to mind, although in our business we deal with lawsuits, threats and attempted intimidation nearly daily. The threat of litigation is a nearly constant hazard of the profession in our attempts to bring you the news of the day in as unbiased a fashion as is within our control.

We also deal with stories that concern the actions, reactions and consequences of you, the citizenry, you, the elected officials, you, the governmental employees, you, the business owners and operators, you, the union officials and members, you the taxpayers, students, elderly, doctors, lawyers and indian chiefs. (Are you still with me here?)

Apart from a factual journalistic chronicle of the events of the day, a newspaper almost by definition does other things. A newspaper prints opinions...those of the publisher, editor, columnists, those of the editorial staff or management-board editorials. A newspaper also publishes the opinions of others not affiliated with the publication through letters to the editor, or guest editorials.

So much for the basic journalism 101 lecture. But the point of it all is, that it is difficult for us at times to understand the mechanics of events that we report on, the nuances, or the motives of those individuals or groups involved. Sometimes the motives of the participants are painfully obvious.

When we report on events in your world, we see the good and the bad, the innocent and the naive and we see the mystery and the questionable. Too often we also see the sad, the disastorous and the tragic.

When we reported the death of a Romulus High School student, we cried inside, when we reported John Rogin's plan to build a multiple story building in Wayne next to the five-story monument to government idiocy called a parking structure, we cheered.

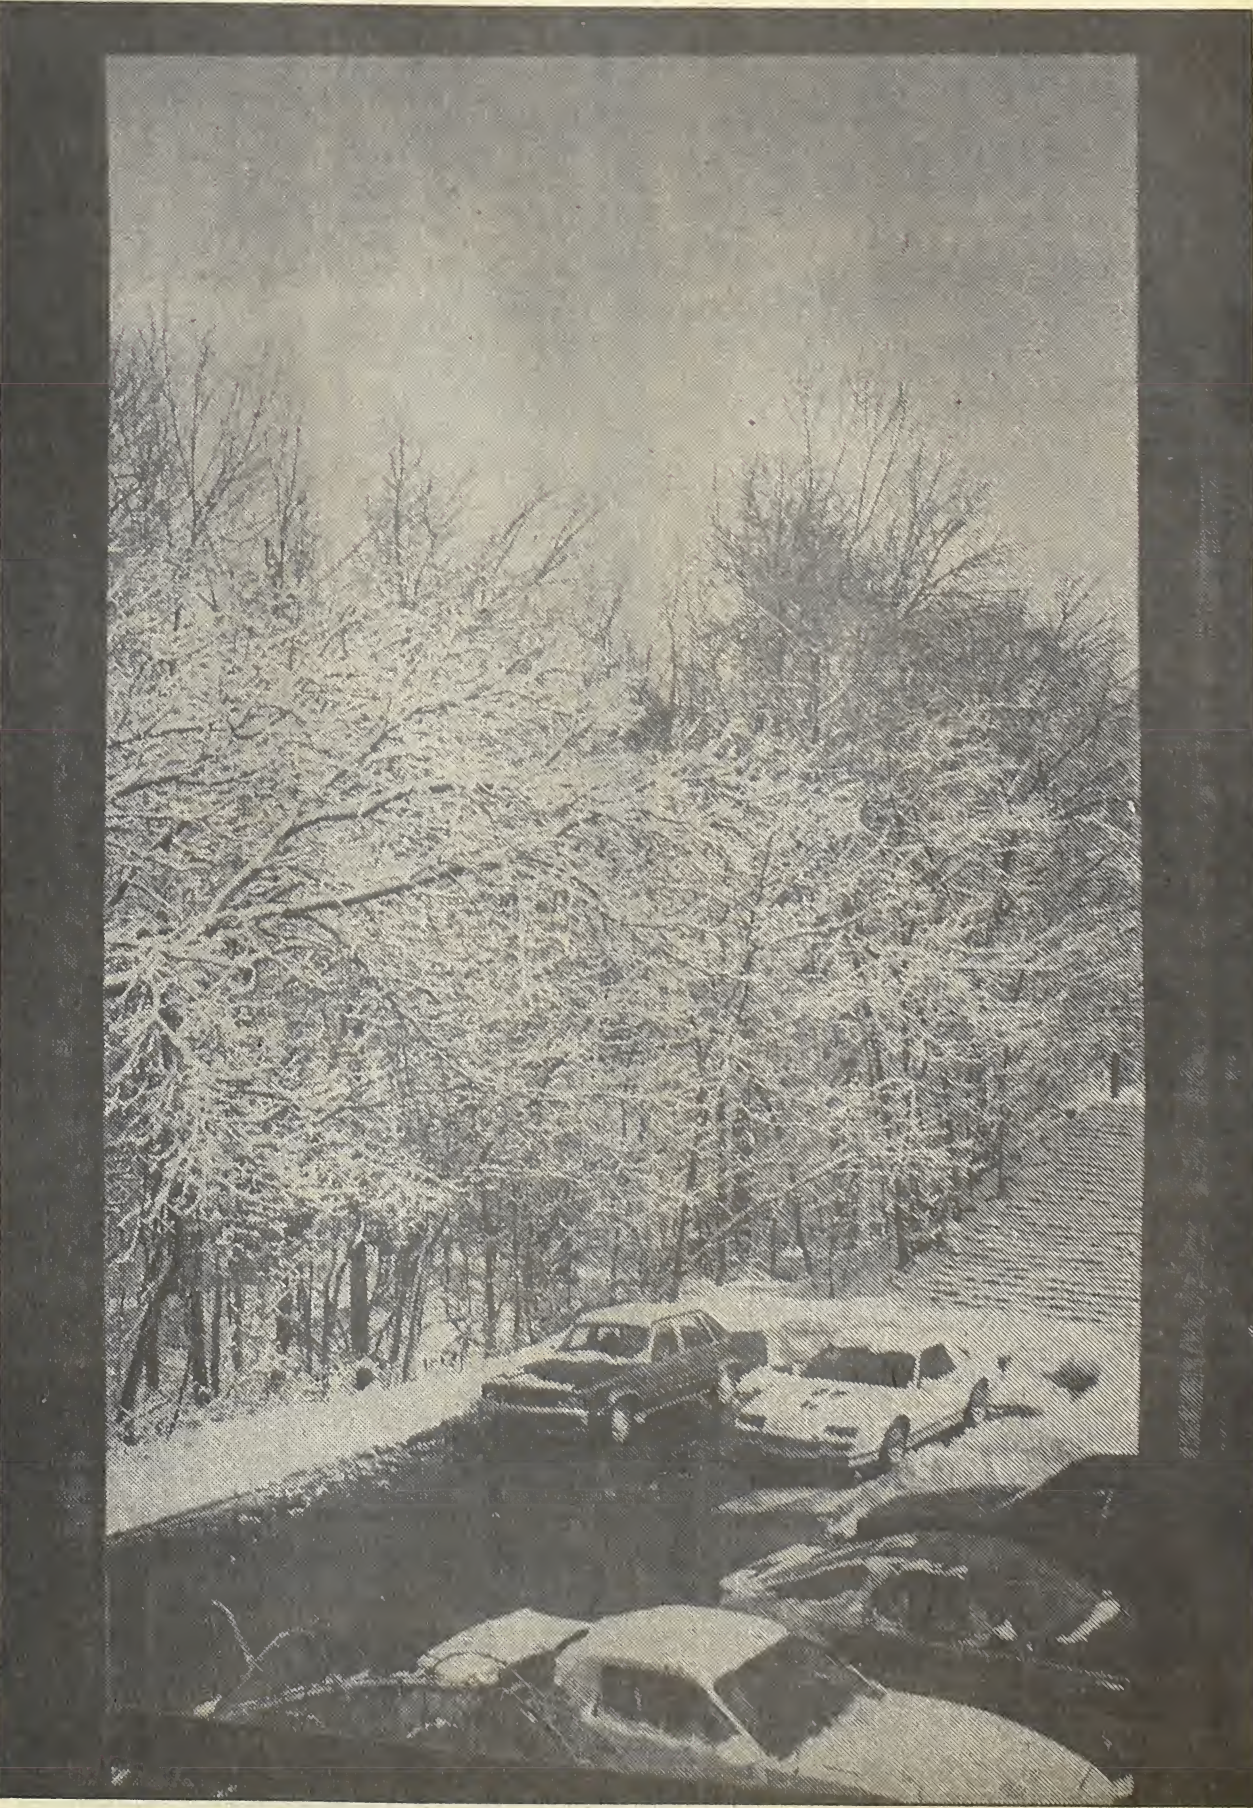

When we reported that General Motors was considering pulling out of Romulus, we held our breath and when we wrote of the Van Buren Republicans' use of township postage for a fundraiser, and their subsequent embarrassment at the mistake, we smiled and took it in stride as did most of them.

When we reported on the I-275 rest stop events, we felt embarrassed for those involved and saddened by the anticipated results of the revelations we had to make to fulfill our obligations to you.

And now, we report to you the demise of a business that is a symbol of all those who be-

Lawsuits rile Canton resident

To The Editor:
Lawsuits against government officials actually end up at the expense of the taxpayers. It has become the fad of the day, especially here in Canton. One economist put it this way: "The more society relies on taxes to determine income, the closer it approaches an era of political fighting and economic stagnation."
Here in Canton we taxpayers are reaping the burden of the whirlwind. Clerk Linda Chuhran is not only suing Supervisor James Poole, but the board of trustees. School bus driver Dennis May, who was fired for disorderly and obscene conduct, is suing the Plymouth-Canton district for a return to bus driver status and back pay. Fireman Gary Sova, who refused to attend Emergency Medical Technician sessions, filed a union grievance suit demanding back pay, etc.

In olden days a worker was rewarded for his or her efficiency and productivity, but now it's the rule breakers that demand the sympathy and favours. They simply hire defense lawyers who manipulate the law via technicalities. The pendulum has swung to the extreme left. Civil rights have turned into civil wrongs. In the old days there was no such thing as suing the public officials since they constituted the government for the people. The ironic tragedy of it all is that the innocent taxpayer has become a punching bag for shrewd operators.

Take the case of Donna Ford, who is suing for "emotional stress." We taxpayers would like to know who doesn't experience stress, especially us?

Everybody struggles with stress from morning till night, be it at home, office or traffic. All this sounds like a laughing joke, except that it is causing quarrels, waste of time, disruption of government functions and ripping-off the taxpayers.
I don't know Maria Sterlini personally, but she was a friendly public official. She also had her problems, but she didn't sue the township. Nor did firefighter Harry Harrison who was slandered by offensive jokes of a union official.

Public officials dedicated to good service make a happy community.

an independent study of the entire plan, but not one commissioned by the PCHA board. No, indeed. The study we would ask for would be commissioned only by the member communities who would determine the parameters of the findings and request a recommendation outlining the best solution for those same members.

While we would not doubt the integrity of the study already done or that of the members who commissioned it, that study was performed on behalf of the PCHA and the interests of that group were those on which the findings were based. Those interests and the interests of the taxpayers might be totally compatible . . . but our citizens deserve to have that second, independent and totally unbiased opinion.

The balance of operating funds of the PCHA has increased by $11 million in the past three and one-half years. The last time a proposal was made to return these funds, then at a $22 million figure, there were conflicting legal opinions from attorneys as to the legality of such a return. The measure lost by a large margin, due opponents claimed then, to the arguments waged by the more influential members of the board to those who were less than informed.

This is not an issue that can be taken lightly by our local communities - although it quite often is left in the hands of representatives who get busy, or who do not have the time to do the type of investigation necessary to understand the complexity of all the lieve in free enterprise and the American dream.

Bill Mulholland phoned last week to tell me that he is being evicted from his present location in the Metro Place Mall.

Bill said, "We've been friends a long time and I didn't want you to hear it from someone else . . . I wanted you to know from me."

I admit, I was in shock and I thought that Bill, too, probably was. Bill will not be moving the store, but feels, rather, that he is left with little choice but to terminate his business in Wayne, a business begun in the early 1900s by Bill's father.

The actions of a landlord had set off a reaction the consequences of which will not be fully known for months, or perhaps, years.

And on another front, the board members of the People's Community Hospital Authority have set upon a course of action that will insure that things can never be the same, no matter what. They have embarked on a course I would prefer to believe they honestly feel to be in the best interests of their constituents. I am troubled, however, by their strategy.

When we reported their actions, and commented on them on our opinion page, the reaction was somewhat puzzling. We have had calls laced with insults both personal and professional directed both at me and at this publication.

We have had the audacity, it seems, to ask the anointed a question - to suggest an alternative to their chosen course of action. I'm just waiting for other state agencies to catch this independent instinct and seek a similar change in status.

What are you as the voters and taxpayers going to do or say when, oh let's say, the the State Department of Labor, decides to become a non-profit corporation? Or the State Insurance Commission, or Department of Commerce . . . hey, how about the State Senate? Then the senators could elect their own President. Ridiculous!

Believe me, truth is, in fact, often stranger than fiction.

In one week we have the passing from existence a pillar of the foundation of the City of Wayne while the PCHA, a state agency, plots to incorporate as a non-profit business. That means no taxes folks. And the plan includes fortifying the new "corporation" with $33 million that, no matter what, does not belong to the board members.

Action-reaction, cause and effect. Who's behind these latest events? Do they really understand the consequences of the actions they are taking? Do they care? We shall see as the saga continues.

See you next week.

issues.

We urge our local leaders to block this vote until there is no doubt as to the correctness and benefit of this action. And we urge our readers to help their elected officials to do that by phoning them now, or tomorrow, at city hall or the township office and expressing the concern which should be evident.

The funeral of the present PCHA could be an expensive one, indeed, and our taxpayers deserve to know that the proper beneficiary is named for the $33 million estate.

dan's dogs

by dan a. morris

when it was a puppy, that aggressive dog would be alive today!

Copyright 1986 Dan Morris

It is not uncommon in any class of dog obedience to have that one dog who possesses more negative qualities than positive ones. Most times this is due to being spoiled, being coddled and rarely being corrected for poor behavior. But, that's what schools are for — to teach the human how to control the animal.

The teacher's job becomes difficult when he is faced with correcting a problem dog and the owner of that dog prevents him from doing so. The part of this scenario which becomes contradictory is that the same person probably shopped carefully for the obedience school he found most appealing and then once becoming a student of that school, he ends up challenging the instructor's knowledge and authority. It makes no sense!

No trainer in his right mind will be abusive or unfair to any of his clients. His students will eventually become walking advertisements so it would not serve his purpose to single out one student over the others to cause embarrassment or ridicule. His only objective is to straighten out a problem dog.

What is a problem dog? Well, we all have owned one and every dog would end up being one if not for obedience schools. The real ornery, problem dog has that super-stubborn streak, a challenging nature and a fearless attitude which could end up with someone being bitten eventually because this dog has learned how to get his own way. To control a dog like this one, the student must temporarily assume a more "macho" image than I advocate. But is only a temporary impression used to instill in the dog's mind that the person, not the dog, will control the situation.

To accomplish this, the dog must be instigated to make the mistake of growling or snapping at his master in order for the master to have a reason to strongly correct the dog. If the correction is done properly, the dog will back down, assume the attitude of an obedient pet and think twice about challenging his owner again.

This is not being cruel. This is no more than spanking a child who ran into the street when told never to do so.

Correcting a dog properly at the onset of training is intended to eliminate severe corrections later on. It's preventive medicine — warding off bad behavior in advance while it is easy to control and before it becomes difficult, if not impossible, to correct at a later time.

None of us enjoy hearing a dog had to be put to sleep because it was so aggressive no one could control it and no school would accept it. Now, if someone had taken the time to correct it for poor behavior

County prepares for spring floods

The hide tide may be coming soon for some residents in western Wayne County and county officials are gearing up to stop it.

Wayne County Executive William Lucas announced recently that all emergency services will be on alert and ready to deal with flooding if the situation becomes serious.

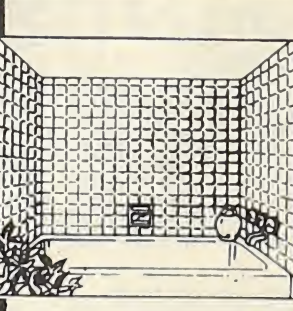

Lucas reported that the county hopes to prevent a 1973 flooding disaster that left thousands homeless and caused more than $54 million in damages. High-water levels have already been predicted along many lakes and rivers in southeastern Michigan, with the Lower Rouge River Basin included.

To prepare for the attack on unwanted water at the spring thaw, Lucas indicated that unbudgeted items such as sand, heavy equipment and personnel are being readied to act immediately if necessary.

"Organization and speed of response is crucial in such situations," said Lucas. "The (county) will provide central authority for decision making and information."

Behind the screens

What really happens behind the screens of the movie theater business is news to most movie goers. However, it isn't news to those who make the movie magic like Duane Smoke, projectionist at the Quo Vadis Theater in Westland (above). Smoke is the sole operator of six screens and projectors all at the same time. In the projection room, high technology is obvious everywhere with platters spinning film into the projector, over pulleys and wheels across the ceiling and back onto a reel. Below, Walter Shafer, founder of the Shafer-Wayne Theaters, displays plans for his proposed LaParisien Theater in Garden City. The year was 1955 and the Shafer family laid claim to the only theaters in the area with the Garden City facility and the State Theater in downtown Wayne. Shafer died one year later.

Butler makes behind-the-scenes movie magic

By RAY DAY
ANP Staff Writer

Most theater goers are well aware that in order to see the latest movie at the neighborhood show, it will be necessary to extract a hefty some of money from the wallet for tickets, drinks and munchies.

Most people are also quite adept at determining whether that same film will be a booming success or an ultimate flop. But the same people probably couldn't begin to describe what goes on behind the scenes - in management, in the box office, or in the projection room.

Mike Butler can. Butler, the modest office manager for the Dennis-Wayne Theatre Company who tries to keep his name "out of the news", is responsible for the behind-the-scenes aspect of the theatres owned by the company which include the Quo Vadis in Westland, State Theatre in Wayne, Dearborn Theatre in Dearborn, Ecorse Drive-In and Wayne Drive-In.

"My job is keeping track of the administrative end of the business, all of the paperwork and that," Butler said of his position.

Although such a job description sounds very simple, Butler actually works a long week and deals with just the right people tractor. "The booker negotiates with film distributors. They decide on the movies that we are going to play," explained Butler. "We feel in the long run that it's better to let this guy do the leg work."

Butler reported that even though most movies are produced months and sometimes even years ahead of the release date, theater owners don't know for sure whether they will be showing the pictures in many cases until just days before the scheduled release date.

"In general, movies open on Fridays. We are usually still fiddling around with scheduling on Tuesdays," said Butler.

Even with this very loose scheduling process, theater owners are offered the chance to view the films months ahead of the release date. Butler indicated that the movie distribution companies offer all local theater owners a chance to view the film two to three months in advance at one central location. Although a lack of time has all but eliminated this part of his job, Butler reported that this advanced screening many times lets theater owners know if the movie will be a hit and bring in huge profits or if it will be an all-time flop equal to that of "The Attack of

for the film and give a hefty deposit in advance of showing the film.

The recent box-office smash "Rocky IV" was one such up-front movie. Butler said approximately $100,000 was needed to secure the movie for his set of theaters.

Other movies, however, are not so costly. Film distribution companies are quick to recognize the not-so-hot films and will rent them at ridiculously and organizations so that theater goers in the area will have something to do each Friday and Saturday evening.

Aside from building maintenance and employing enough workers to man each of the theaters, the first move in securing a film for the local area begins with a booker, according to Butler. The booker is hired by the Dennis-Wayne Company to negotiate with the Hollywood conglomerates like Paramount, Warner Brothers, Tri Star and Universal Studios. The booker bids on the shows against other local theatres in an attempt to get the box-office hits in one of the theaters owned by his con-

the Killer Tomatoes."

The securing of a movie isn't all that wasy however, Butler continued. Big bucks are the name of the game in the film business.

Theater owners pay for films in one of two ways generally. The most common method is for theaters to pay the companies a set percentage of all money taken in for ticket sales. Because this percentage amounts to nearly 90 percent on the average, profits from ticket sales are almost unheard of, according to Butler.

The second payment process is an up front method, one in which the theater must agree to pay a set amount of money

Where's the buffalo?

Wayne lounge has burger wave of the 90s

By RAY DAY
ANP Staff Writer

Clara Peller of the famed Wendy's commercial which popularized the "Where's the Beef?" slogan had better start rehearsing "Where's the Buffalo?" if the local burger craze goes national.

Jake's Lounge on Wayne Road in downtown Wayne has been serving buffalo burgers at the bar for only three months now. But, the popularity of the peculiar delicacy has become so great that the item now tops requests for the once well-known Jake's hamburger.

Jim Bradley, new owner of the bar/restaurant, reported that he acquired the idea of bringing such an oddity to the area after eating such a burger while traveling in northern Michigan.

"I had one once at Almel's in Richmond, Mich. The big thing is that people are on the health kick about low fat," said Bradley.

Health wise, the buffalo burger is better than the all-American hamburger. Bradley reported that buffalo meat has 13 percent less fat which essentially means that when a 1/4 pound buffalo burger is cooked, the item still weighs 1/4 pound afterward.

As for the taste, Bradley said that the buffalo burger is a little sweeter but much less greasy. The bar owner indicated that the buffalo burger is actually better tasting than the hamburger and he should be one to know having eaten at least one burger each day since he started serving the item in November.

Realizing what may be a true blessing to the business, Bradley has plans to expand upon the buffalo-meat trade and begin serving steakettes as well. Roasts and prime-steak cuts are also available but Bradley intends to concentrate on only the burger and smaller cut of steak.

Finding a supplier for the buffalo meat wasn't as easy for Bradley as taking the first bite into a burger though. The bar owner reported that he made countless phone calls all across the state hoping someone raised buffalos and would sell him the meat.

Finally, a supplier in northern Michigan came through and has been supplying the local eatery with enough ground buffalo meat to serve nearly 180 burgers each week.

But Bradley wants to bring the business even closer to home, namely in his own backyard. This spring, he hopes to purchase two buffalo calves and will raise them until maturity at his Lake Orion Township home.

As for the future of such an odd creation, the buffalo burger should become a hot item everywhere soon, Bradley said, although he doesn't expect the two all-beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese and whatnot to be replaced by buffalo meat at the neighborhood McDonalds.

"Places that look for something different will probably be selling the burgers soon. Fast food chains don't specialize - it would be a specialty item rather than an everyday thing," Bradley said.

And with that, the bar-owner-turned-buffalo-raiser lifted yet another juicy burger centered between two buns and all the trimmings to his mouth and expressed a look of contentment. Indeed, the beast that once was right at home on the range of the wild west has become quite comfortable right smack in the middle of this suburban Detroit bar and restaurant.

Burgers: The one-time king of the wild west is right back home on the range, the radar-range oven that is, at Jake's Lounge in Wayne. Buffalo burgers are quickly becoming the all-time favorites at the bar, even surpassing the renowned Jake's Lounge hamburger and fries. Here, Rose Parrish, chef, proudly readies another burger for a hungry customer.

Lovers' delight

I finally started by taking those big red hearts off of the windows and then remembered that I never really made the one I love dinner.

Each morsel must be carefully researched before I add it to my loving menu. Rather than invite the likes of Masters and Johnson into the confines of my kitchen, I begin with the powers of seafood.

Now, I'm not talking about just oysters, buddy. I'm looking at crustaceans brimming with iodine (shrimp), luscious lobsters and succulent crab for their professed abilities to titillate when served by candlelight.

The romantic powers of the great truffles can not be ignored. It is written that eating truffles "makes women more tender and men more apt to love." But at a little over $300 per pound for the imported variety I'd like a guarantee. (And we always thought that those pigs sniffed out the truffles because they were hungry.)

It is also written that bamboo shoots, bird's nest soup, duck's feet, ginger, ginseng and water chestnuts absolutely drive some people wild. Not being one to place all the blame on the Chinese, did you know that parmesan cheese, garlic, olive oil and veal are the main ingredients in what gives those wily Italians their pinch for life.

My collegiate research assistant insisted that olive oil must have been for the old folks because Crisco oil is in "in thing" today. (If only Loretta Lynn knew the truth about olive oil!) But it isn't only the Chinese and Italians who have a passion (excuse the pun) for life. No ethnic group can lay sole claim to other aphrodisiacs such as raw beef, brandy, cardamom, dandelions, dates, raw eggs, fennel, frogs, gelatin, leeks, liver, nutmeg, pimentos, pistachios, snakemeat, tomatoes (did you know they were once called love apples?), turtles, vanilla and yes, even watermelon. I told you not to swallow those seeds.

I'm sure the mere mention of the word chocolate would bring goose pimples to even the staunchest gourmand. Personally, I would rather rub a little on my right . . . palate.

So with saucepan and skillet in hand I venture into the realm of seduction. My lovers dinner consists of an appetizer of steak tartare followed by six oysters on the half shell. If, by that time, magical juices still had not performed their randy magic, I continue with a salad made with fresh truffles, leeks, pimentos, and tomatoes in a garlic/brandy dressing. If that doesn't get temperatures rising, I bring forth my veal parmesan and water chestnuts sauteed in pure, virgin olive oil. (Take note Loretta.) For my final display of passion I bring out chocolate Genoise with a warm cardamom vanilla sauce. (Excuse me while I wipe away the dew from my brow.)

"How do you feel, my little cabbage?" I ask as perspiration begins to ruin what was left of my Musk cologne.

"Fine," she says as she delicately wipes the last of the vanilla cream sauce from her tender lips.

The trip to the living room is filled with plenty of "oh la la's" and dainty nibbles on my left earlobe. She gazes into my soft brown eyes. Just then I remember the General Foods International coffees. Politely I excuse myself, stoke the fire in the fireplace and raise the volume on Ravel's Bolero. By the time I boil the water and return with warm cups, she is sound asleep from the past five hours of sampling my cuisine. I guess this is what happens after 12 years of marriage and two kids.

Chilled fresh fish and smoked varieties have always been considered an aphrodisiac in ancient Roman times. Emperor Augustus ordered his female attendants to eat fish at least twice daily to give "strong physical support" to the troops.

CHILLED TROUT WITH SPICY DIPPING SAUCE
2 whole trout, steamed and deboned

¼ cup sour cream
2 tablespoons horseradish
4 drops Tabasco
½ teaspoon Worcestershire
½ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon salt

Place trout decoratively on platter. Chill in refrigerator. Combine remaining ingredients. Mix thoroughly. Use as a dip for fish. Excellent with other varieties of fish, too.

The Swiss have an interesting tradition regarding fondue. If, in the course of dipping, your bread falls off the fork and into the pot, you kiss the person to your right or you run the risk of becoming impotent.

CHEESE FONDUE
1 cup white wine
1½ teaspoons dry mustard
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon Worcestershire
2 lbs. swiss cheese, shredded
fresh grated nutmeg

Dredge cheese with the flour. Combine wine and Worcestershire in fondue pot. Heat to almost boiling. Add remaining ingredients and stir until smooth.

A favorite recipe of my friend Jacqui the Astrologer, these spicy cashews are preferred by Arians and are used in Arian rituals as an aphrodisiac when consumed with sweet red wine.

SPICED CASHEWS
2 cups raw cashews
1½ tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon cayenne
½ teaspoon cumin
dash salt

Cook cashews in butter until golden brown. Drain on paper towels. Combine salt, cayenne and cumin. Toss.

One of my favorite recipes is for guacomole. Traditionally in Mexico, guacomole is served with all the entrees except dessert to ward off evil spirits. I chose it for lovers dining because it's fun to rub on someone's body and lick off.

juice of 1 lemon
1 tomato, chopped
3 green onions, chopped fine
1 small clove garlic, smashed
1 small can green chilies, chopped

Combine all ingredients and mix well. Salt can be added if desired. Cover and chill and serve with veggies and corn-chips.

Aliette Benson, owner-chef of Aliette's restaurant in Detroit serves this special soup made for lovers only - only because you'll have to be madly in love with someone to want to kiss them after trying it.

CREAM OF GARLIC SOUP
2 cups chicken broth
2 cups beef broth
2 large heads garlic, peeled, minced
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
2 cups heavy cream, scalded
2 large egg yolks, beaten

In a large saucepan, combine chicken and beef broths and garlic. Bring to a boil and boil for five minutes. Strain into another saucepan through a sieve. Press garlic with back of spoon to extract juices. Discard garlic and return broth to a boil. In a small dish, mix butter and flour together to make a paste; beat into boiling broth using a wire whisk. Continue whisking until broth is slightly thickened. Stir in hot scalded cream. Whisk ½ cup hot soup into egg yolks, return egg yolk mixture to soup pot whisking until thick but do not boil. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Makes 1½ quarts.

What course on LOVERS DINING would be complete without a recipe from Caesar's Bordello, Ely, Nevada. Caesar doesn't really say this salad will make a lover out of ya, but it is light enough to enjoy "in bed" with champagne and croissants.

CAESARS SALAD
2 medium heads romaine
1 large clove garlic, mashed
1 lemon half
fresh ground pepper
½ cup olive oil
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
2 - 1 min. coddled eggs
dash Worcestershire
6 tablespoon parmesan cheese

Dressing with coddled eggs can be made ahead of time. At the last minute, add broken romaine, cheese, toss. Add dressing, toss again. Salt and pepper to taste.

This recipe is still used in China and was originated in Kowloon, Hong Kong by a widowed mother who was trying to "woo" her future son-in-law with the favorite Chinese recipe.

CHINESE BARBECUED PORK

2 lbs. boneless pork loin
¼ cup sherry
2 tablespoons soy sauce
¼ cup honey
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground ginger

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Cut pork loin in half lengthwise. Place in skillet. Mix remaining ingredients. Rub meat on all sides with mixture. Roast one hour, turning and basting often. Serve with hot cooked rice, if desired.

Who else is better known for their lovemaking than the notorious Italians. This next dish is derived from the Sicilian region of Italy and is known for its robust flavor and pizzazz - just like the Italians!

VEAL SCALLOPINI ALLA MARSALA
12 - 2 oz. veal scallopinis flour to dredge
salt/white pepper to taste
½ cup Marsala wine
¼ cup olive oil
4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Dust scallopinis with flour. Heat oil and butter in large skillet. Quickly saute scallopinis to golden on both sides. Remove to ovenproof platter. Deglaze pan with Marsala and pour deglaze over veal. Sprinkle with parsley. Enjoy.

low levels to theater owners. These companies, however, are not always so keen in their movie judgment.

Butler reported that "Jaws" was a very cheap film to rent initially, although the price tag to rent it jumped quickly after film distributors learned that Americans really would be interested in seeing a huge shark devour and consume humans by the dozen. Likewise, "10" which starred Bo Derek and "Star Wars" were both "turkeys", as they are dubbed in the industry, before becoming box-office success stories.

But because cheap movie rentals are an exception and not a rule, theater owners are forced to make a profit another way - munchies.

Indeed, it is the popcorn, the pop, the Ju-Ju Bees, the Sno Caps and the red licorice that keep theater owners happy. Butler reported that these concessions make up the major portion of company profits and are necessary to keep the film industry alive.

"What is helping us is that people still like to get out of the house. The theater business is still viable and it's going to be around. As long as people need to interact and socialize, there will be movie theaters."

"You don't make any money off of tickets. By the time you pay for the overhead, there's no money without the concessions," reported Butler. "Without the concessions, there wouldn't be a theater in town."

But even with good concessions and a cheery theater staff, Butler pointed out that it requires good judgment in choosing the right films for the area to make the theater business a success. Locally, movie goers enjoy the Clint Eastwood movies, "Coal Miner's Daughter" and comedies. However, an "Amadeus" or "Color Purple" at the Quo Vadis in Westland won't attract a full house or a full bank account for theater owners.

Aside from the business aspect of operating a theater, Butler explained that high technology has become the name of the game in showing a film. Reel-to-reel movies and old carbon-lighted projectors have moved over for the advent of platters and high-quality sound systems.

Typically, movies come to the theater on 20-minute reels, explained Butler. These reels are then spliced and chopped and combined with others to form one huge reel containing the entire movie. This new, large reel is then placed on a platter, a horizontal metallic disk which is similar to a record player, and the film is fed into the projector.

Butler indicated that the age of platters marked the end of two projectors for each screen having to switch off and on at the end of each 20 minutes. The platters, and other technological advances in the industry, have also given rise to another fad for the business - the multi-screen movie house.

Ending the age-old huge screen and huge auditoriums found in theaters up through the 70s, the split theater has made the business more competitive and more able to ensure some kind of profit, according to Butler.

Butler reports that the multi-screens in his own theaters have allowed a variety of movies to be offered ensuring that at least one will be a profit maker even if an adjoining screen is playing a flop.

Mike Butler

"You don't make any money off of tickets. By the time you pay for the overhead, there's no money without the concessions. Without the concessions, there wouldn't be a theater in town."

The Dennis-Wayne corporation has done all the splitting of its theaters in house and has even begun to contract the service out for other theater owners. With all of the Dennis-Wayne theaters currently containing at least two screens which were originally one, Butler reports that the idea has become necessary to stay alive in the business.

As for the future of theaters, amid the age of video recorders and cable television, Butler feels there definitely will be one, although he also maintains that a constant need to meet the changing needs of movie goers will be essential to stay alive.

"What is helping us is that people still like to get out of the house," said Butler. "The theater business is still viable and it's going to be around. As long as people need to interact and socialize, there will be movie theaters."

Hogue – Sapienza

Jeffrey Hogue and Judith Sapienza of Romulus will exchange wedding vows Feb. 27.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sapienza.

The groom-to-be is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hogue. He currently is serving with the U.S. Navy in Guam.

Jeffrey Hogue – Judith Sapienza

Ferguson – Luhtanen

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ferguson of Garden City have announced the engagement of their daughter, Beverly Sue, to Todd Alan Luhtanen of Westland. Luhtanen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Luhtanen of Barchester, Westland.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Garden City High School. Her future husband is a John Glenn High School graduate.

A May 17 wedding is planned.

Beverly Ferguson – Todd Luhtanen

Clarification

A headline and nameline last week should have identified Beth and Joseph Feld as a newly married couple. Beth is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Farmer of Westland. Joseph is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Feld of Fern-dale.

Witkowski – Kalinski

Lisa Witkowski of Wayne and Dave Kalinski of Garden City exchanged wedding vows Nov. 9, 1985, at a Catholic chapel in Farmington Hills. The double-ring ceremony was attended by approximately 350 people.

Lisa is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Witkowski of Wayne. Her new husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kalinski of Garden City.

The bridal gown was of ivory satin with a cathedral veil. Her bouquet was accented by peach-colored roses and gardenias.

Participating in the ceremony were Diana Clise, maid of honor; and bridesmaids, Cindy Goodlow, Patty Rozell and Debbie Rumps.

Best man was Randy Kalinski with ushers, Greg Kalinski, Matt Corbitt and John Dawson.

The evening ceremony was followed with a reception at Bonnie-Brook Country Club. The two took a seven-day cruise to St. Thomas, San Juan

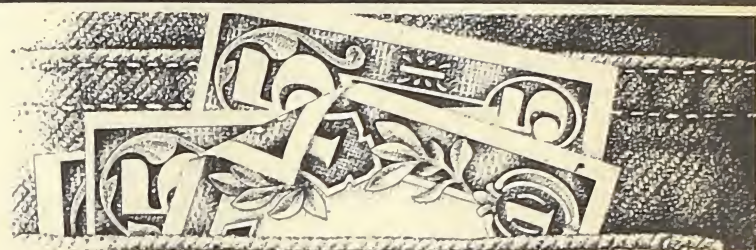

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Kalinski and Nassau for their honeymoon.

The new Mrs. Kalinski is a graduate of John Glenn High School in Westland. She presently is attending Schoolcraft College and works as an office manager at R. Roberts Residential Services in Livonia.

Her new husband is a graduate of Garden City High School and works as a sound technician at West Side Sound and Communications.

The couple have made their new home in Garden City.

Playoff pairings

It could be Romulus vs. Wayne in Class 'A' cage district semi-finals

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Because of the luck of the draw, one of the two top teams in the area won't reach the championship round at Wayne. Fans will probably have to settle watching the state-ranked teams fight it out in the semi-finals.

The two - Romulus, ranked No. 1 in the western region and sporting a 15-2 over-all record, and Wayne Memorial, which won 17 straight before losing to Ypsilanti last Tuesday and with a 18-1 record - have been assigned to District 14. Wayne is host for that district.

While Romulus and Coach Al Wilkerson drew a first round bye, Wayne will see action the first night, Tues., March 4, taking on a problem-plagued Taylor Kennedy. That game is scheduled for 7 p.m.

If Wayne, an overwhelming favorite, should hurdle the first round obstacle, it would land in the semi-final round slated for Thurs., March 6, against Romulus.

Taylor Center and Taylor Truman are scheduled to meet at 6:30 p.m., March 6, prior to the Wayne-Romulus match-up.

The championship at Wayne is slated for 7 p.m., Sat., March 8. The district champ will advance to the Class A regional playoffs hosted by Eastern Michigan University.

Wilkerson points out that Wayne is a well-coached and disciplined club.

"Wayne is a very good team. Their record speaks for itself. They are well-coached and very well disciplined and, because they have the home court advantage, I feel that they will be favored."

Wayne will be faced with trying to stop Terry Mills, a 6-9 senior who is considered one of the top, if not the best, high school cager in the country this season. Mills "can do it all, and in many ways," according to Wayne coach Chuck Henry. "They are an excellent team and, only time will tell if we are going to meet."

In the meantime, Romulus looked ready for the playoffs as it turned back a highly-touted Ohio club, Toledo Devillbis, 78-66, last Thursday. With Mills scoring 26 points, the Eagles managed to dispose of the No. 5 high school team in Ohio, capitalizing on mistakes and turnovers.

Devillbis took command in the first half as 6-7 forward Deon Thompson teamed with Ken Vaughn, an All-American prep griddy (6-5, 220) to provide ample ammunition to shoot down the Eagles. Toledo led 17-14 after one, increased that margin to 36-31 after two.

But, with Mills keeping the local cagers within reach, Romulus came back with a barrage of baskets in the third period as Stevie Glenn came alive and contributed eight of his 21 points and Samuels Keith came off the bench and added six points.

At the end of three quarters, Romulus emerged on top, 55-49, and held off their visitors from Ohio with a 23-17 scoring edge in the finale.

Mills, who had 26 for the evening, also set a consecutive free throw scoring record when he canned six for six to make it 22 successful charities in a row. He has hit on 29 of his last 30 free throws. Glenn finished with 21.

Thompson accounted for 23 points while Vaughn chipped in 18.

In the meantime, Ypsilanti cut Wayne Memorial's 17-game winning streak, 65-63, as the Zebras wasted several excellent opportunities in the final minutes to sew up the victory.

"When you let a lead evaporate as it did," said Henry, "you have to be disappointed. We made a mad dash at the end and just couldn't make it."

Wayne led 14-8 after the first period and 29-22 for the half, but the Zebras still maintained a five-point, but precarious lead going into the final frame where the hosts outscored the previously undefeated Zebras, 26-16. Mark Robinson sparked Wayne with 28 points, collecting 16 of 18 at the free throw line.

On Friday, Wayne retained the Wolverine "A" Conference title with a 64-54 victory over Wyandotte as Robinson again collected 24 and Rod Sommers sank 12.

Salem snaps Glenn streak

By Keith A. DeMolay
ANP Special Writer

Oops. Something happened to the Rockets of Westland John Glenn on their way to the Western Lakes Activities Association championship. They lost a squeaker to Plymouth Salem.

Glenn is scheduled to meet Farmington Harrison Friday night to determine which team will emerge as conference champ.

That little detour, caused by Salem, came in the form of a 61-60 loss last Friday. The setback also snapped a 12-game Glenn basketball winning streak.

The defeat was the Rockets' fifth in 19 games this year and only their third in WLAA action. Glenn sits 12-3 in the Lakes Division and awaits next Friday's confrontation with Harrison which will determine the championship.

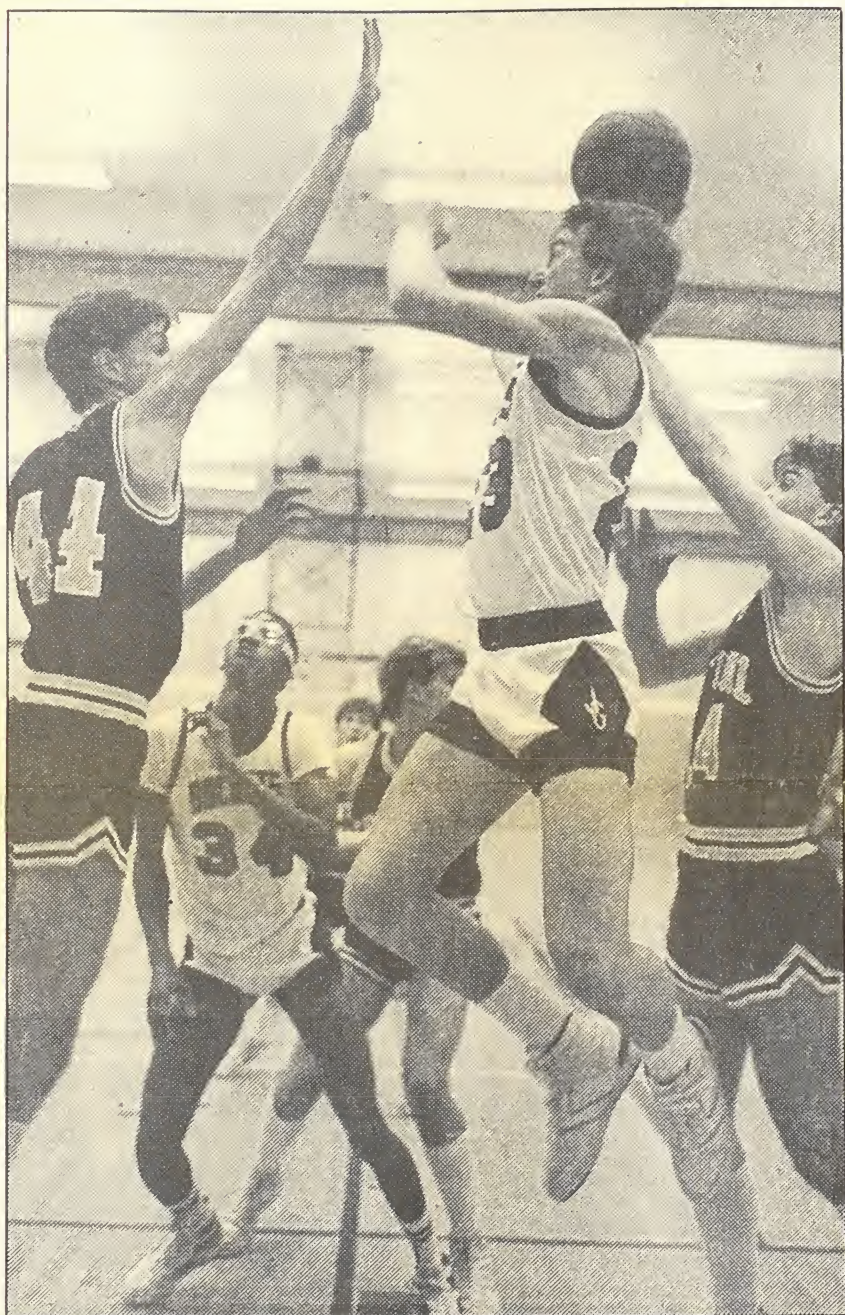

"We have to make the free throws, especially in close games," said Glenn head coach Gordie Davis. "We played well in our man-to-man defense and we played hard. I'm definitely not discouraged."

Glenn knew the week wouldn't be as smooth as the others have been lately when they ran into a scrappy Livonia Churchill squad. It took every ounce of energy, 20 points from Steve Hawley, and strong defensive efforts from Greg Bates and Tony Boles to nail down a 55-52 triumph.

Then came Friday against Salem.

The Rocks, who had suffered a 22-point loss to Glenn earlier in the season, were not about to surrender that easily this time.

But the first quarter looked like Glenn picked up right where they left off on January 24. The Rockets got off to a 4-1 lead by the 6:38 mark when Boles hit an outside jumper. It quickly expanded to 8-3 on Andrew Grazulis's 3-point play. Glenn's lead stayed at

Sandwiched shot

Bottled up by two defenders, Westland John Glenn's Steve Hawley goes up for this shot against Walled Lake. After posting their 11th straight victory, then outlasting Livonia Churchill, 55-52, last Tuesday, the Rockets fell suddenly Friday night as they saw their 12-game winning streak come to an end at the hands of Plymouth Salem, 61-60.

five through most of the quarter until the last minute when two quick Salem baskets closed the gap to 16-15 at the buzzer.

Then Salem began to serve notice that this game would be different from the last. Tim Hanosh's basket at the 6:54 mark gave Salem its first lead and from then on, the lead changed hands twice but neither team could forge more than a three-point gap.

Glenn took the lead in the middle of the period thanks to baskets by Ken Gietzen and Tim Wiseley.

But Mike Hale's basket at the 3:15 mark restored the lead for the Rocks. Hawley's shot with two seconds left cut Salem's halftime lead to 34-33.

The second half was more of the same intensity as Salem built a nine-point lead by the 4:24 mark of the third period on Paul Makara basket. But Glenn refused to give up. Back they came with six points, four by Hawley and two by Diete-Spiff, and the gap was down to 42-40. But Salem kept its poise and lead, 48-45, after three quarters, thanks to four points from Hale.

The Rocks kept Glenn at the bay during most of the third (See ROCKETS, Page 2-C)

4 overtimes Inkster outlasts Willow Run, 52-50

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

It took four overtimes and a Terrance Wynn layup with seven seconds in the extra period to give Inkster a nail-biting, 52-50, victory over arch-rival, Willow Run, Saturday night. The victory kept coach George Thompson and his Vikings atop of the Suburban Athletic Conference basketball league.

And, with Highland Park also winning, the SAC title chase remains a two-team affair.

"We were complacent," noted Thompson after the much-needed victory over the Flyers. "We can not lose and hope to retain the title. I can't see Highland Park also giving ground in the race."

Inkster has to face River Rouge in its league finale Friday night, and will have the home court advantage. The Vikings must win to retain a share of the championship they won a year ago with a perfect record.

"If we both win Friday night," Thompson said, "there will be co-champs. Since we are the defending champs would you please stress that they (Highland Park) will be sharing the title with us. And not visa versa."

It was almost over for the champ, and Thompson points out that "we can only blame ourselves for what happened against Willow Run. We had ample opportunities to put the game away at the free throw line during the regulation game, but failed to capitalize on them. We have no one to blame but ourselves."

Inkster looked like it was going to blow the Flyers off of the court as the Vikings leaped to a 16-6 first period lead. But Willow Run, thanks to balanced scoring by Steve Houston, Steve Reese and David Cook, refused to bend and came back and played on even keel the rest of the way.

Ahead 31-24 at the intermission, Inkster "couldn't buy a bucket" as the cliché goes and scored only 13 points for the rest of the regulation game caroms came in the first half. Wynn also contributed 10 points, including the game-deciding basket.

Inkster made good on 6 of 17 free throws while the Flyers canned 10 of 14.

Earlier in the week Inkster turned back Waterford Mott 64-56 as Andre Davis led all scorers with 21 and Jesse Hardy added 10. Inkster led all the way, forging to a 21-16 first period advantage, then increasing that margin to 39-26 at the halfway mark before outscoring their out-of-conference rivals 13-12 in the third. When Mott pulled within eight in the while Willow Run came back to outscore their foes 13-7 in the third and 9-6 in the fourth, and changing the strategy from fast to low tempo the rest of the way.

Both teams went scoreless in the first extra period, then exchanged baskets in the second frame and tallied four points each in the third. The Vikings decided it with a 4-2 edge in what proved to be the final and fourth extra period.

Although Andre Davis led the Vikings with 16 points, Willow Run's Houston had 18 and that total stood up for the game's high. Inkster also received a superb all-around performance from Barry Hardy who contributed 12 points and 10 rebounds. However, those last period, Thompson retrieved his second string from the field and inserted his first liners into combat.

"We gave everyone an opportunity to play in this one," said Thompson whose Vikings took a 15-3 over-all and an 8-1 SAC record into the week.

Inkster will travel to Dearborn High next week to compete in the Class B District Playoffs.

"It's the first time we will be playing over there and it should be interesting," said Thompson. Other teams scheduled to see action along with Dearborn at the Dearborn district include Dearborn Heights Robichaud, Cherry Hill and Dearborn Divine Child.

Gymnast Tomasko shines

An outstanding individual performance by Debbie Tomasko lifted Westland John Glenn to a 123.9 to 115.0 victory over conference rival, Northville.

Tomasko accounted for four first places as she earned a 9.0 in winning the vault; an 8.0 for her victory in the bars and an 8.4 was the winning score for the floor exercise. Debbie shared first place with Marcie Diepveen in the beam. Each received 7.7 scores for their efforts.

"We're getting some outstanding performances from our girls," noted Glenn coach Jean Hawley. "They're doing just fine and we're hoping to peak for the league and the regionals."

The Westlanders will travel to Jackson Parma on March 8 to compete in the regional.

In the meantime the Rockets took on out-of-conference rival, Dearborn, and came up on the shortend of a 127.25 to 123.05 decision.

Tomasko again provided the Westlanders with a pair of first places. She captured the vault with an exceptional leap worth 9.1 (out of a possible 10) by judges. She also finished first in the floor exercises thanks to an 8.7 performance. Debbie and Angie Temelko also received 8.5 scores on the beam - good for a tie for second place.

'Bubba' is also undefeated

At 250 pounds, junior high wrestler is a power

By CURT JORDET
ANP Staff Writer

It would be an understatement to say that the North Junior High School wrestling team in Romulus relied heavily on Ed Miller this year.

And no wonder. At 270 pounds, Miller was one of the most ominous figures to set foot on a wrestling mat in Michigan this season short of the collegiate level.

"Bubba," as his friends call him, was one of three

North grapplers to finish the recently-completed season with an undefeated record. But while other teammates could lay claim to seasons that were just as successful, it was basically Bubba who would draw all the attention when he stepped onto the mat.

Under a new state safety regulation governing the maximum weight limit for prep wrestlers, nobody was allowed to compete who weighed in excess of 275 pounds. The limit presented a problem to several wrestlers at the high school level who were forced to shed pounds, but was generally considered a safe limit for competitors at the junior high level, most of whom are still in the middle of their adolescent growth spurts.

Bubba was an exception to the rule.

"He was just an awesome figure out there," said head coach Bill Cuhnan. "Bubba was good last year (when he weighed a svelte 250 pounds and compiled a record of 22-5), but this year he just blossomed into one of the finest athletes that I have ever coached."

An ironic twist lies in the fact that Bubba does not fit the mold of your typical jock. With an infectious smile and a congenial personality, the muscular eighth grader more often than not gives the appearance of the "nice kid" image his coach has labeled him with instead of the win-at-all-costs approach others so often espouse.

In fact, Bubba can often be found practicing the tuba instead of his wrestling holds, and his 3.3 grade point average gives additional testimony to his skills in the classroom.

Besides all the other activities, Bubba also made the grade as a top notch football player by playing on first-string positions at nose guard, center and left tackle - though not all at the same time.

"He's just an incredibly (See BUBBA, Page 2-C)

'Awesome' on the mats

Even before reaching the high school scene, junior high wrestlers "Bubba" Miller (center) and Maurice Bridges (at right) are making a name for themselves as outstanding young wrestlers. Both are undefeated. With the two grapplers are coach Bill Cuhran who shows off a "wrestle-down" chart presented to Miller after winning the heavyweight division, junior high school tournament.

Elder wins regional wrestling title

Belleville's Darrell Elder proved that he is the best 155-pound wrestler in the region. Emerging with a 43-1 over-all record from the Class A regional championships, Elder captured the title with an impressive 15-0 decision over Dan Costello in the finals of the tournament staged at Gibraltar Carlson.

"He's tough. Really tough," said Belleville coach Gerald Malacek. "He works hard and it's obviously paying off."

Elder launched his bid for the regional crown with impressive victories over Redford Union's Jason Schwartz, whom he pinned in 1:37. He also disposed of Brian Clemens of Livonia Churchill, 13-4, to advance to the finals where he met and defeated Costello with little difficulty.

Elder will be among the top candidates to win the gold at the state finals scheduled for this weekend at Grand Valley State College.

Elder's teammate, James Bishar, also qualified for state by placing fourth at the regionals in the 105-pound class. He lost a third place medal when he was defeated in the consolation round by Detroit Catholic Central's Brandon Rocks, 6-0, in overtime.

In the meantime, Romulus lost its district champ, Jim Schelner, when the courts refused to extend a temporary restraining order. Schelner, allegedly involved in a break-in of the lunch room, led to a suspension, that was upheld by the courts.

However, Romulus managed to come away from the regional with two qualifiers for state. Heavyweight Steve Anderson placed second and will taking a 23-8 record to state, while 119-pounder, Matt Scully, who is boasting a 34-7 mark, finished fourth.

Wayne Memorial will also be represented at state with 112-pounder, Bob Eeles, who finished fourth.

Coaches at the Gibraltar regional named Wayne Schimming as "Regional Coach of the Year". Schimming's Eagles posted a perfect 13-0 record and also won Belleville, Ypsilanti, Riverview and Melvindale Invitationals while they were runner-up at their own tournament and second at Monroe.

'Bubba'

Bubba and two teammates - Terry Sutton and Maurice Bridges - rode the crest of undefeated seasons in leading North to the number one position in the state among junior high school wrestling programs.

North laid claim to the bragging rites last month when they completely dismantled a 17-team field in capturing the Monroe Jefferson Invitational.

Miller, Sutton and Bridges were joined by teammates Paul VanRiper and Tim Kosikowski as gold medal winners at the invitational, while four other North grapplers - Bruce Boyd, Eric Harris, John Hance and Mike Morton - made it to the final match before succumbing.

The Romulus troupe garnered a total of 263 points to easily out-distance runner-up Gibraltar Carlson. Perennial powerhouse Temperance Bedford, who handed North its only defeat during the 14-1 season, finished a disappointing third with only 181 points.

'Lost weekend' for Canton cagers

It was the kind of week Coach Tom Niemi and Plymouth Canton cagers would like to forget.

First, Livonia Stevenson edged the cold-shooting Canton club, 37-36 last Tuesday as Niemi's minions managed to hit an anemic 29 percent from the floor - a 6 of 19 in the first quarter.

Then, although they out-scored Northville from the field 21-12, Canton lost another squeaker, 43-41, dipping their league record to 7-7 on the season.

"We played good defense," said Niemi commenting on the Northville game, "however, we had a lot of shots that just didn't drop in."

The frustration was compounded by Niemi and his charges during the closing seconds when Canton managed to pick off passes on three separate occasions and the refs called traveling, stepping and carrying the ball. "Those turnovers could have meant the difference," he added.

But failure to hit percentage shots also were costly. Canton put only six points on the board in the first period and trailed by five, then, the two league rivals exchanged baskets evenly the next eight minutes, so Niemi was still looking at a five-point deficit, 24-19, when he escorted his cagers into the locker room. Northville increased the margin by four by outscoring their visitors 10-6 in the third period but Canton rallied to within one basket to make up the difference.

Northville actually won the game at the free throw line where they cashed in on 19 of 25 charities. Canton made five of eight.

Joel Mies was the only Canton cager to break into the double figure scoring column as he sank eight baskets for for 16. Dan Young counted eight points.

Canton also played catch-up with Stevenson and came within a basket of pulling the game out. Stevenson rode a 14-8 first period lead to a 22-17 halftime advantage and hung on thanks to a 10-8 third quarter.

Joel Mies accounted for 17 of his team's 36 points and Matt Levesque came off the bench and sparked Canton in the second half.

Wayne swim star among state's best freestylers

A post-season honor was bestowed upon Nicole Drake, a Wayne swimmer. Nicole was selected as the most outstanding female junior high school swimmer by the Michigan Interscholastic Swimming Coaches Association.

The awards' presentations was made at Hill High School, following the annual Junior High School State Swimming & Diving Championships conducted last week.

Nicole was awarded the "MVP" trophy following her record-breaking performances in the 200-yard freestyle and the 100-yard freestyle. She was clocked in 2:04 and 58.33, respectively, establishing two junior high school records in winning the championships.

The competition took place among the various schools in Michigan featuring 7th and 8th grade swimmers. Nicole swims for Stevenson Junior High School in Westland and the Livonia Spartan Aquatic Club. She is the daughter of Roger and Melinda Drake of Wayne.

Robichaud, Dearborn clash in 1st round

Robichaud, a defending district champ, will square off with host, Dearborn, in the first round of the Class B playoffs which will get underway at 6 p.m., Tues., March 4. In the nightcap, at 7:45 p.m. Cherry Hill has the dubious honor of meeting Inkster.

There are no games scheduled for Wed., March 5, according to tournament manager Jack Johnson, who serves as Dearborn High's athletic director.

On Thurs., March 6, the playoffs will resume at 6 p.m. with Dearborn Heights Annapolis clashing with the winner of the Robichaud-Dearborn game. Then, at 7:45 p.m., Divine Child will take on the winner of the Cherry Hill and Inkster contest.

The championship at Dearborn is scheduled for 7 p.m., Sat. March 8.

period, except at the 5:51 mark when a Boles' lay-up gave the Rockets 49-48 lead. But Hale's three-point play restored the lead, only to have Grazulis tie it twice (at 51 and 53) before Boles retied it another time with a thundering slam.

But Salem's tough foul-shooting at the end clinched the victory and sent Glenn to the championship game.

The Junior Varsity Rockets didn't have a smooth week, either, as they suffered a heart-breaking, 44-41, loss despite 13 points from Dave Schnepel and a 68-58 loss to Salem in which Jeff Graham scored a career-high 23 points.

keeping up with smith

by dorothe smith

699-2714

Local resident Doreen Craven is heading south to sunny Florida to spend 10 days sightseeing and visiting relatives.

She will be in Hollywood, FL, visiting Mrs. Neil Craven, mother of husband, George. But, the most important stopover will be in Florida City where she will spend time with a very special lady-her aunt, Mrs. Starr.

This is a very important year for Mrs. Starr as she will celebrate her 100th birthday in August.

The Sumpter Senior Citizens are busy planning an open house to take place on May 18. It will be the sixth anniversary of the group. The organization was started in 1980 and has grown steadily since.

The group is looking forward to a big celebration with music and a "show and tell" covering the past and looking to the future.

The following students were included in the Presidents Honor List for fall 1985 at Cleary College: Lynette M. Babik, Caren Cole, Colleen Lundgren and Norma McLaughlin of Belleville and John Weipert of Willis.

All you fans of romance novels won't want to miss the April 12 meeting of Friends of the Library.

The guest speaker will be Ruth Langdon who has written many romance novels and appeared on television with Phil Donahue as a guest on "Good Morning America".

More information is available at the library or you can call Ginger Bruder at 699-2344.

CITY OF ROMULUS

DOG LICENSE

All dogs in the City of Romulus must be licensed. This is for your benefit. If your family pet ever slips its leash, this policy could keep your child from being heartbroken. Also, if you are bitten, knowing that the dog is licensed and has had rabies shots can save you from worrying about a painful series of inoculations. The law was designed to benefit all City residents, whether or not they own dogs. A City dog license costs $5.00 for both male and female dogs. Licenses for spayed and neutered dogs cost only $1.50. A lower license fee for these dogs is intended to help control the rise in the canine population. Senior citizens (age 65 or older) pay only $2.50 or $.75 per license. Proof of rabies vaccination must be presented when applying for a new dog license or renewal. March 1st of every year is the deadline for license renewal. A late fee of $1.50, in addition to the regular fee will be charged after that date.

TO LICENSE YOUR DOG

Bring a rabies vaccination certificate and an affidavit or Veterinary Certificate for spayed female or neutered male dogs, as well as proof of your age, if you qualify for the senior citizen discount, to:

Office of the City Treasurer
Romulus Municipal Building
11111 Wayne Road
Romulus, Michigan

between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. - Monday through Friday. A license will be issued to you at that time. The license tag must be worn by the animal at all times, attached by a collar of leather, iron, copper, brass or other durable material. Puppies must be licensed when they reach six months of age.

PENALTIES

Any person not adhering to any of the regulations outlined in this letter will be in violation of the provisions of the City's Animal Control Ordinance.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION:

Please call the Romulus Animal Control Center at 941-0666 Ext. 245, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. For emergencies after hours, call the Romulus Police Department 941-8400. The Animal Control Center will respond to all calls reporting licensed and unlicensed dogs running loose, injured animals, dead animals, dangerous dogs and excessive barking dogs.

Peace of Mind

A time to be born; a time to live; a time to die. The cycles of life unfold, ever encompassing all the many wonders of our world . . .

the joy and promise of spring; the verdant splendor of summer; the magnificent charisma of autumn; the silent white majesty of winter.

As we follow the patterns, it is inevitable that we finally reach the winter of our life. Isn't it wise to plan now for life's final cycle?

This section was produced to help answer some of the questions we inevitably face.

Death . . . a responsibility for the living

When a death occurs there are a number of responsibilities that are immediately thrust upon members of the family of the deceased. First of all, those most affected by the death, need comforting attention, and then the funeral director and the clergyman preferred by the family should be notified.

If there is not already a funeral director chosen by the family of the deceased, which is often the case, then one good solution to the problem is to seek recommendations from others who have faced this decision. Many people have already given this selection some thought, however, so when death occurs, they know whom to phone.

Even though funeral establishments must have high standards for continued community confidence, there may be a particular funeral director or home more appropriate to the special needs or requirements of particular families.

When the funeral director has been called, he will promptly make his professional services available. It is not usually necessary to phone the coroner or medical examiner, who are required only for violent or accidental deaths. But if there should be any question about this, the funeral director will so advise. This can be of importance when insurance provisions for accidents are later discussed.

Other family members, close friends, neighbors and business or professional associates should be notified of the death. This is a service that the funeral director can provide, or it might be requested of a friend so that the responsibility of the funeral arrangements might be taken care of properly.

A consultation with the funeral director should occur as soon as possible so that personal information about the deceased can be obtained in order to complete the death certificate and prepare the obituary. Since some of these facts might be difficult to obtain, it may be necessary to look for the information prior to the meeting.

Assisted by the funeral director and clergyman, the decisions regarding the time, place and type of funeral service will be made. Many times, the funeral service will be at the funeral home, although the family church may be chosen. If there is no church affiliation, but a religious service is desired, the funeral director can suggest a clergyman. If a non-traditional service is desired, he can also suggest alternatives that maintain the positive values and dignity of the funeral for the family.

There is no one prescribed form for the funeral. The family, clergyman and funeral director will arrange the type of service it is agreed will best meet the needs of the bereaved. It is the needs of the living that are of the utmost importance.

With the counsel of the funeral director, a casket will be selected and the service. From a complete selection which should be shown, a casket must be selected, once again keeping the needs of the family in mind. While most often, suitable clothing is chosen from the deceased's wardrobe, funeral directors do offer a line of burial garments.

A cemetery vault, too, must be chosen. This is the other container which will be used at the cemetery to contain the casket and remains.

The funeral director can make all the cemetery arrangements, but a personal contact from the family to the cemetery directory might sometimes be advisable. When a cemetery lot has previously been acquired, this presents little difficulty.

It has become customary to place a floral spray from the family on the casket. This should be delivered to the funeral home just before the visitation period begins. The funeral director can place the order for the

Wills: A legacy of caring

By CURT JORDET
ANP Staff Writer

When a person dies, it isn't just the memories of that person that continue to linger on. The person's assets also serve as an ever-present reminder of his worldly existence.

For that reason, it makes sense that a primary concern of any living individual should be in determining exactly how his or her assets should be distributed in the event of an untimely death.

That's where a will comes in handy. To coin an old phrase, where there's a will there's a way.

Nevin Rose, a Westland private attorney who has been practicing law since 1974, has had extensive experience in drawing up the legal documents that provide for the handling of a person's estate. And though most people become squeamish at the mere thought of preparing for the time when they will no longer be around, Rose said there is no time like the present to start.

"It only makes good common sense to have a will drawn up," said Rose. "Any right-thinking parent would want to direct the manner in which his or her property is distributed, and a will is the best way to accomplish that."

Property that is held jointly at the time of a death would automatically be awarded to the surviving owner(s). The dead person's personal assets, however, would be distributed according to the contents of a valid will or — in the event that a will had never been drawn up — would be divided according to state statutes governing property distribution.

While these statutes have been adopted to specify how property is distributed in the event of a person's death, Rose said it provides virtually no flexibility in adjusting the property distribution in a manner acceptable with the dead person's wishes.

"For example," said Rose, "current statutes say that if a man who has a wife and children dies, then his personal estate would be distributed with the wife receiving the first $60,000 and half of the remaining balance, while the children would split the other half."

"If that distribution plan is not acceptable with him, then he had better have a will drawn up."

Rose said the laws become even more complex if there are no children involved, or if the deceased has been through several marriages and has had children by each. Some laws even include the parents of the deceased.

"And these laws can change at any time," he explained. "Even though the laws that affect a person might be perfectly acceptable to him at the present time, by the time he dies it is possible that the state statutes governing property distribution could have changed."

Rose said a will can also specify who surviving children should be placed with, thereby avoiding lengthy court battles that sometimes serve to alienate families and upset the offspring. Another advantage, he added, would be in the tax savings a will might provide to the heirs.

While individuals are legally able to draw up their own wills without the help of an attorney, Rose said that idea is not always a sound one.

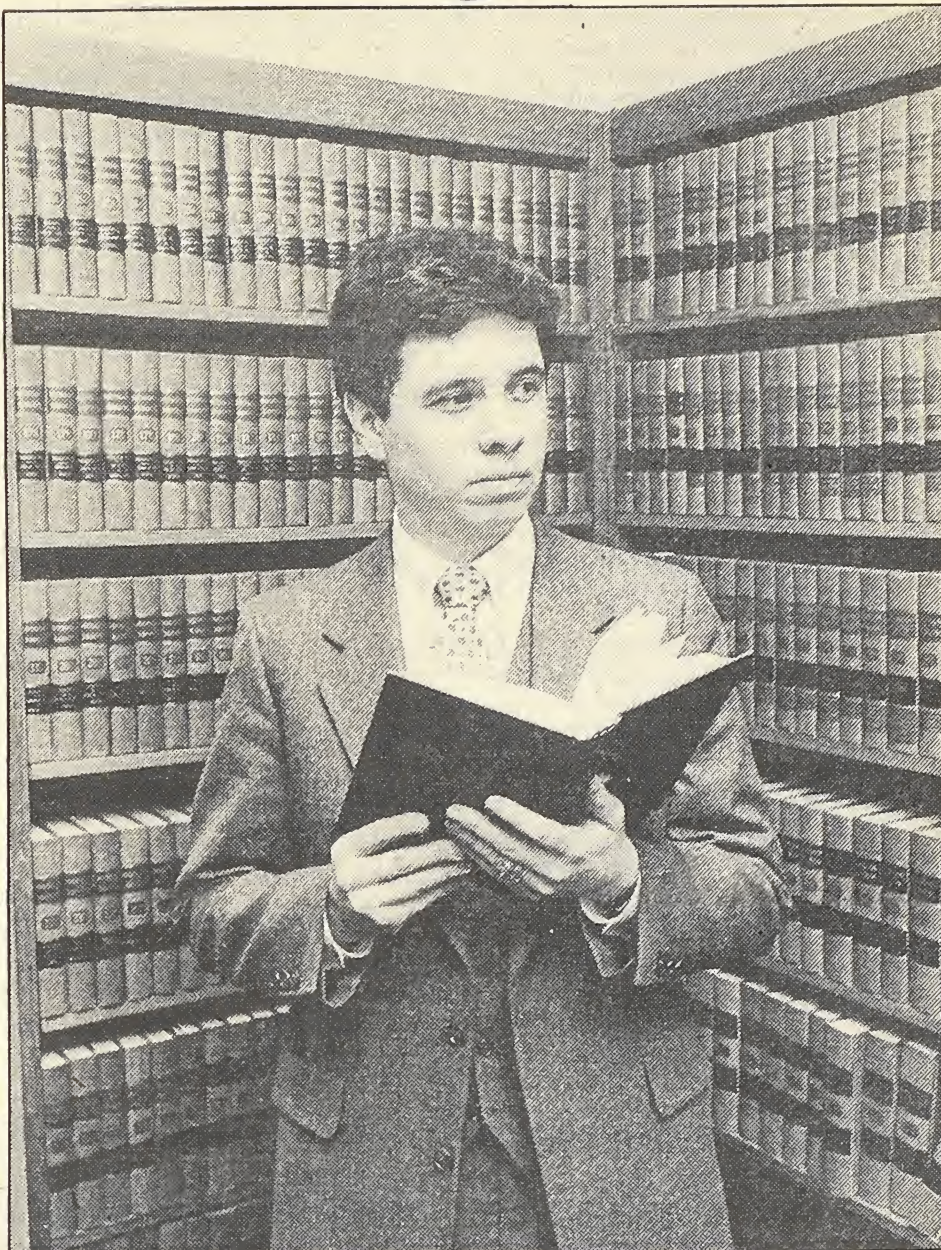

"People who draw up their own wills do not always cover all the bases," he said. "As long as a person wants to determine where his money is going to go, it makes more sense to meet with an attorney and have the peace of mind that comes with knowing that his wishes are going to be carried out."

Prices vary depending on the attorney selected, but Rose said the "vast majority" of husband-wife teams can have two simple wills drawn up that will meet their needs. Rose's office, for example, will perform the service for $75.

Those who insist on drawing up their own wills, however, should heed some words of caution. A holographic will, one which is drawn up by an individual without any witnesses, can be ruled valid only if it is drawn up in the person's own handwriting. Even then, the will could become subject to the scrutiny of heirs, who might dispute the competency of the drawer at the time the will was created.

"You're just asking for trouble if you use that method," said Rose.

A far safer method would be to draw up a normal will and sign it in the company of at least two witnesses.

Any right-thinking parent would want to direct the manner in which his or her property is distributed, and a will is the best way to accomplish that.

ses. While the witnesses need not know the contents of the will, they should also sign their names (and addresses) to the bottom and be able to vouch for the drawer's competency.

Rose said the validity of such a will has a much stronger chance of standing up in probate if the witnesses are in no way provided for in its contents.

A much newer method of recording will requests — that of video taping the event — has been hailed by Rose as "a good way to prove the competency of the individual."

"But if I were going to do that I would definitely want a lawyer present," he said. "Once again, you want to make sure that you cover everything completely and properly."

family, or perhaps a direct contact with the florist from the family would be preferable. For a veteran, a flag can be made available to drape the casket instead of flowers. The funeral director can obtain this flag without charge from the Veterans' Administration.

With the assistance of a family member, the funeral director will prepare the obituary announcement or paid death notice for publication in the newspapers. This notifies people of the time and place for visitation and the funeral services. The funeral director can also send notices to papers in other localities, often former places of residence. In deciding which type of notice to send, the funeral director is able to explain which will be more effective and informative, according to the policies of various newspapers.

During visitation hours at the funeral home, the funeral director serves an important role in assisting the family in the reception of relatives, friends and acquaintances who call to pay their respects. At this time, he should be available to aid in religious services or help in any other matters which could arise.

Together with other family members, the appointment of pallbearers must be considered. These individuals should be notified, either by the funeral director, or the family of their selection and asked to assist. Sometimes, honorary pallbearers are chosen, not to assist in carrying the casket, but instead to walk ahead of the casket, honoring the memory of the deceased.

Obviously, arrangements will vary according to the individual situation and the wishes of the family. It is important, throughout the planning, to remember the need to encourage a realistic approach among the members of the family of the deceased. They must face the reality that someone they love has died, and they must make the needed adjustments to the fact of life. There is a need for support in this time of sorrow. This suffering will be lessened by the sympathetic support of others. Relatives and friends can be of immeasurable help to the bereaved. The funeral can be a valuable experience as it meets the religious, social and emotional needs of the mourners. The arrangements for the funeral are particularly

Key to smooth funerals is planning

By CHRISTINE RIZK
ANP Staff Writer

"One of the things I like to have people go away with is, if dad or mom dies, where do they want to be buried? Do you know how many have responded by saying 'I never asked Dad; did you ever ask Mom?'"

James Vermeulen is as familiar with death and its aftermath as some people are with events in their daily lives — it is, after all, his job to "create order out of disorganization."

Vermeulen is the funeral director for three area funeral homes located in Detroit, Westland and Plymouth.

He daily deals with a task that he readily admits and accepts as that which people vehemently try to deny dealing with — the death of their loved ones.

Inevitably, it is those closest to the deceased upon which the responsibility lies for funeral arrangements — a task Vermeulen says is difficult at best, impossible at the worst.

For those whom funerals connote an unpleasant task, which includes virtually all who wait until the death of a loved one rather than plan ahead, Vermeulen responds as such:

"Funerals are not for the dead, they are for the living. No one is invited but all may attend."

A simply theory to follow, he suggests, if you accept the comfort and sympathy extended by friends and designed specifically to ease you out of your pain.

"I think often people think about some of this but they don't think about the people who remain," Vermeulen said. "If there is love and attachment there, they're going to have to make some big adjustments."

Vermeulen offers a variety of pre-planned funerals, including video tapes explaining funeral arrangements to those dealing with teaching children about death.

The key word, he says, is planning ahead.

"When people are in grief, it's very difficult to be sensible, rational," he explained. "That's what I'm here for . . . to be sensitive to their needs."

Vermeulen suggests visiting a funeral director before a death occurs. This way, he said, you can sit down in a comfortable frame of mind and discuss the economics, as well as emotional, needs of planning a funeral.

"When you go to buy a car, you don't just buy the first one you see, do you?" he questioned. "The same should apply to a funeral home. You should ask questions, check out prices."

The biggest obstacle in getting through funeral arrangements, either before or during a death, he said, is overcoming the desire to deny death.

Most people don't want to talk about death, he said, because they've had bad experiences in dealing with death themselves. Or because they can't except the 'reality' of death.

"In the past, funeral directors weren't doing what they should have done; they failed to meet the needs of the individual in dealing with grief," he said. "We were sometimes too mechanical in our approach."

Today, funeral directors approach the topic with renewed appreciation for their clients. In fact, it took a personal tragedy for Vermeulen to recognize that he needed to revamp his attitude toward providing for others.

After a death in his family, he was able to determine what others might need in the event, as in this case, of the death of an infant.

"I had never realized the importance of a mother holding her child after his death until then," he said, "but when you consider a mother has carried that child for nine months, who else but a mother can feel that closeness, that bond?"

Vermeulen's approach to an infant or child's death is one laced with sympathy and gentleness.

He personally addresses children.

Veterans offered special burial benefits

By RAY DAY
ANP Staff Writer

With the rising costs of funerals and private burials, many Americans are beginning to take a second look at National Cemeteries and burial subsidized by the Veterans' Administration.

Arthur Selikoss, regional director for public and consumer affairs for the Veterans' Administration Region III, reported that the demand for VA burials is growing.

"We now have more than 100 cemeteries throughout the country. This is land that used to be run by the Army," Selikoss said.

In Michigan, the VA has just recently opened a new facility in Augusta, near Battle Creek. The site is the former Fort Custer.

Selikoss explained that a VA burial can save hundreds of dollars for any past or present member of the U.S. Armed Forces. In addition, spouses of U.S. Veterans are eligible to be buried in the national cemeteries free of charge.

Some veterans, however, opt to not be buried in the rather limited number of national cemeteries. The VA takes care of these individuals as well, Selikoss said, by giving a funeral and burial subsidy. This funding can be up to $450 and can be used to purchase a headstone or to defray the costs of the private burial.

Burial in either the national facilities or in a private cemetery is usually arranged by the funeral directors, according to Selikoss. However, he said that if the task is left to the family members of the veteran, they should call the nearest VA office.

In the Detroit area, consumers may call the VA at 1-800- 482-0740 or 964-5110.

Selikoss also offered a few helpful answers to questions frequently asked by persons applying for VA burial and funeral benefits. More detailed and further information requests should be directed to the above numbers.

Q: Is it true that burials in Veterans' Administration national cemeteries are made without distinction to race, creed, national origin, military rank or awards?

A: Yes. All veterans eligible for burial in a VA national cemetery are afforded equal rights when burial sites are selected.

Q: Didn't several national cemeteries at one time have distinguished service, officer or other special burial sections?

A: Yes, when the National Cemetery System was the responsibility of the Department of the Army. Segregated burial sections were discontinued in the late 1960s because they were considered a form of discrimination.

Q: If I am eligible to be buried next to a love one buried in what was at one time a special burial section, am I guaranteed a burial space adjacent to the occupied gravesite?

A: Yes. Those few persons who have gravesites reserved next to their spouses can be assured that reservations will be honored.

Q: What happened to the unusual burial space in the segregated portions that once existed?

A: Unused portions of special sections are being incorporated into regular burial areas with the gravesites used for any eligible veteran, veteran's spouse or dependent child.

Q: Have distinguished characteristics like special landscaping that separated the special sections been altered in national cemeteries?

A: In some cases, special sections have been or are being relandscaped in order to obtain maximum use of the space and to assure that all veterans are treated equally with the same dignity, respect and honor earned by every veteran.

The High cost of dying

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Ben Franklin said it best when he noted that "...in this world nothing is certain but death and taxes".

And to that statement one should add: "To avert the high cost of dying set aside funds, or pre-arrange to pay funeral costs now."

That's the advice from most funeral directors in the area.

"It makes good business sense," said David C. Brown, of Brown Funeral Home in Belleville, "that if you can pre-arrange or pre-fund those costs, do them now. Although the funeral costs have stabilized over the past two to three years, they are still going up by an average of 3 percent annually."

Brown said that the major expenditure in funeral costs are associated with the cemetery.

"When you consider that it will cost you between $250 to $500 for a cemetery plot, plus between $300 to $450 to open and close the grave and an additional $1,500 for a vault for the casket, you can see that it begins to add up."

Brown pointed out that more and more people are coming to him and discussing pre-arrangement.

"What happens here is that the individual will place funds in a CD (Certificate of Deposit) which will earn the going interest rates and when the need for the money sedan, casket coach, casket, internment receptacle and even a gift to the church, (usually if one is not a member of the church).

One must also remember there will be a substantial cost in the purchase of the grave marker or monument

There are some tough decisions to be made at a time when they are grieving. One should try to get all the information they can before decisions are made.

arises, it will be there.

"The best advice I can offer families at this moment would be to discuss pre-funding of funeral costs now, so when the need occurs they will be prepared."

Other cost considerations include and are often overlooked are death certificates, (needed for legal documentation) newspaper obituary announcements-The Detroit News charges $111.74 for a two-day announcement, while the Detroit Free Press' cost is about $90.

There are other costs such as the hearse transfer of the deceased to the funeral home, Michigan Sales Taxes, organist (if you desire to employ one) along with a long list of other expenditures such as acknowledgment cards, funeral car or

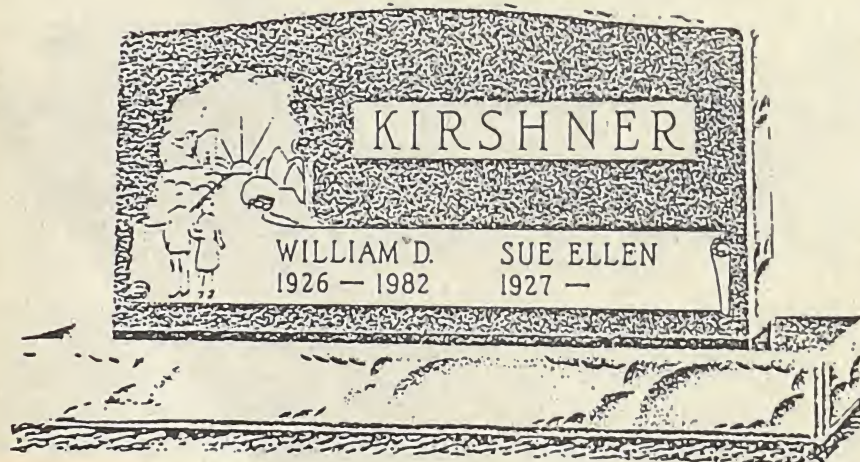

and the inscription on the grave stone.

Jerry Pawlus, of Pawlus Roberts Bros. Funeral Home, also of Belleville, points out that families "should communicate with one another to make sure they agree on what they want."

Funerals are emotional, and touchy," Pawlus adds, "they can bring families together and sometimes divide them. There are some tough decisions to be made at a time when they are grieving. One should try to get all the information they can before decisions are made."

Pawlus adds that pre-arrangement (of funeral costs) "definitely would help, but again these decisions should be made only after deliberation and communication with all of those concerned."

important in giving those remaining some useful, meaningful and helpful ways to express themselves.

There are various forms of tributes from which to choose, according to what seems most appropriate for the deceased. This might include a eulogy or personal remarks, either by the clergyman or a close personal friend. Biblical passages, favorite poetry or other appropriate readings may be chosen. As the services are planning with the clergyman, he can assist in deciding on selections that will ass to total service.

The selected clergyman will probably recommend music for the service, both for its beauty and symbolic significance. He can help choose something appropriate from a wide range of musical selections. Many families choose traditional hymns, often with a soloist or singing group to add to instrumental music. Some families will prefer to use more contemporary selections, either instrumental or vocal. Actually, the important measure of the music selected is that it be a meaningful tribute to the deceased.

Dealing with dying, a part of life

By RAY DAY
ANP Staff Writer

Even as hard as it is knowing of the terminally-ill condition of a loved one, psychologists recommend an awareness of the common traits associated with death which can make the grieving and adjustment process easier for both the dying patient and his family.

In his book, Looking at Ourselves, James Geiwitz explained that the problems of adjustment, which include coping with loneliness, sorrow and re-alignment of day-to-day living, are common psychological feelings expressed by the family of one who has died. With these feelings also come a mourning period, resentment, insecurity, loss of sleep and appetite—all of which make the death encounter an easier one to accept.

But Geiwitz also pointed out that many people forget to realize what psychological feelings and emotions a dying patient experiences once he himself realizes his destiny. The psychologist split the dying process into five major divisions for the victim of an inevitably close death—denial, anger, bargaining, depression and final acceptance. Geiwitz feels that an understanding of these stages by family members can make the dying process an easier one for the patient and family both.

The first stage, denial, finds the dying victim totally oblivious to his own fate. Patients are commonly known to ignore their physical conditions in this stage which can lead to a weaker and even sicker condition.

Next, according to Geiwitz, comes the acute anger and hatred for just about everyone involved. Family members can lessen the burden of the stage by understanding this hatred and, if nothing more, accept it and live with it.

Bargaining, the third stage, sees the patient making deals with himself, doctors, God, Satan and to whomever he may feel could save him from this doom. This stage quickly evolves into a depression period, a stage that many times can be extensive.

Geiwitz explained that this depression can extend to family members as well if this normal death stage is not understood and accepted. Once again, a mere coping with this next-to-last stage can make death an easier process psychologically for all involved.

Finally, the dying patient will accept his fate and come to terms with his destiny. In this stage, many people re-establish contacts with close friends, take final vacations and explore what they have not yet done in life.

The psychologist explained that the entire death process can be easier for the family and the patient if the common five traits are understood. He illustrated his point by saying that death is an inescapable fact of life and should be taken as a less fearsome and more accepted part of living.

One dying journalist, Stewart Alsop, perhaps identified with Geiwitz's ideals best right before dying by accepting that inevitable fact of life and learning to deal with it accordingly. Alsop said, "A dying man needs to sleep and there comes a time when it is wrong, as well as useless, to resist."

approaching the topic with a much delicacy and personal know-how as a man with seven grandchildren and a life-time of dealing with death can.

"You'd be amazed at how many people appreciate that first and last chance to place clothing on their child—it meets an emotional need for them."

Meeting emotional needs are as important for Vermeulen as meeting the funeral arrangements. Responsible for putting together some semblance of order out of a naturally mixed up situation, he must anticipate, even before the arrangements are finalized, how the bereaved family will act and adjust after the funeral.

Oftimes, he said, a family set on a particular plan find themselves, afterward, regretting not having made other arrangements.

This, Vermeulen said, can lead to severe after effects and sometimes to psychological counseling.

"That's why I try to encourage an open casket," he explained. "And why I try to include children in visitations. It's important psychologically to see these things because through seeing, we learn to accept death."

Vermeulen advocates talking to children about death and preparing them for what they'll see at a funeral.

Many times, he said, families exclude children from services, failing to recognize that children, like adults, experience the loss of a loved one but in a different manner.

"Parents often tell kids about grandma's death by saying she's sleeping," he said. "But they know she isn't sleeping—it's the next day and she's not waking up."

Perhaps the image is too harsh for parents to deal with but saves the child from later wondering what happened to 'grandma'.

"Children have got to see all the steps," he said. "It's the best way to see and explain reality. They'll get over their grief much better that way."

IN ADDITION TO BEING A BEAUTIFUL, WELL MAINTAINED, FULL SERVICE CEMETERY, (ground burial, cremation and mausoleum crypts) with very reasonable prices, United Memorial Gardens is a photographer's dream and a MAJOR TOURIST ATTRACTION IN SOUTH EASTERN MICHIGAN. United Memorial Gardens has a special appeal unlike that of other cemeteries. Over 81,000 people toured United Memorial Gardens in 1985. Historical groups, bible scholars and patrons of the arts as well as American history teachers for classroom field trips were among the tour groups, which is almost a daily occurrence on our grounds.

The Early American Country Chapel, ducks and swans and Abraham Lincoln along with George Washington, the American Flag, the Pledge of Allegiance, the Star Spangled Banner, The American Eagle, all in everlasting bronze make United Memorial Gardens a teachers delight. The Statue of Liberty will be erected in early spring. Many of our features in marble, graphite and bronze are originals, one of a kind, beautiful and very expensive.

Thousands of people; from the Salvation Army, protestant, catholic and orthodox church groups in their busses, vans and autos are taking tours of the OLD TESTAMENT TABERNACLE, THE ONLY FULL SCALE DUPLICATION OF AN ORIGINAL TABERNACLE IN THE UNITED STATES WHICH IS IN FULL VIEW FOR VISITORS TO SEE WITHOUT CHARGE. FREE TOURS BY TOUR GUIDE TO GROUPS OF 12 OR MORE, WITH A BOOKLET OF THE TABERNACLE STORY.

Our University of Michigan Garden is unique in the industry, for those who make donations, for the health of our nation. FOR INFORMATION OF ANY KIND, regarding prices, burial options, tabernacle tours, field trips or whatever, call 662-8902.
